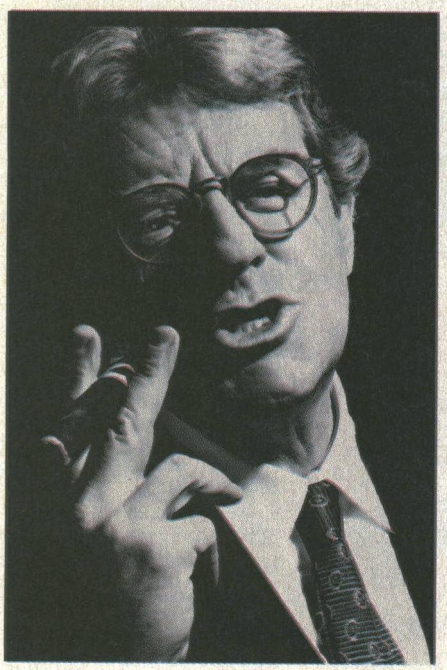
Brian Viner's Cable Stars



Springer's in the air

It is many years since Jerry Springer was mayor of Cincinnati, Ohio, but he remains the consummate political operator, unflappable and self-deprecating in the face of criticism, and the first to admit that his show needs to be taken with an avalanche of salt. Except when guests are subsequently murdered, one might add, although that tragic episode can hardly be blamed on him. On the other hand, it might encourage him to withdraw from television and return to politics. He is already an active Democrat and, yes, at 56 he might yet run for the Senate himself. 'I don't rule it out,' he says. 'There was talk of it last year but it was impossible because of my contractual obligations.'

We are chatting during one of his many visits to London, the city of his birth. 'It is such a comfortable place,' he says of the capital. 'For me, it has the excitement of being abroad, with a kind of hometown comfort. Older Brits have an air of tremendous propriety, but, underneath, this place is just as wild as America.'

He is grappling with the rules of cricket. 'I've been watching a bit and trying hard to understand it. Sport, along with news, is really all I watch on TV. I know of Friends and Seinfeld and stuff like that but I never see them, except sometimes on planes.' Nor does he ever watch his own show, although he recommends a particularly bizarre recent edition entitled 'The Midget Klan'. 'They were all members of the Ku Klux Klan but they were all midgets. I found that pretty hard to understand. These are people discriminated against themselves, but prejudiced against others. That didn't make sense to me.' The Jerry Springer Show, ITV2, weeknights

Frasier star Jane is in the family way

Jane Leeves has started filming the latest series of hit sitcom Frasier, and it's proving tougher than ever before. Not because of the emotional strain on her character, Daphne Moon, who dumped her fiancé Donny, you will recall, in favour of her long-time admirer Dr Niles Crane. It's more to do with the fact that she is five months pregnant and, at the age of 39, is expecting her first baby early in the New Year. She won't tell me anything about the new series of Frasier except to say that her pregnancy will not be written into the storylines. 'No, they've decided to hide it,' she says. 'So I'll be sitting down a lot and wearing big coats.' And when the baby is born? Will she become a working mum? 'Oh yes. I can take the baby to work, in fact there's a crèche next door to the sound stage. I think it was built for [Danny De Vito's wife] Rhea Perlman who had millions of kids while she was working on Cheers.'

Leeves talks in a kind of mid-Atlantic twang, American West Coast vowels having invaded her native Sussex accent. It was her idea to make Daphne a Northerner, once the show's producers had decided that she should be a working-class Brit. In fact, Daphne was made British specifically because network executives wanted to cast Leeves. She had already made her name in the Candice Bergen series Murphy Brown. 'But it was Seinfeld which really put me on the map,' she says. In Seinfeld she played the sex-starved virgin Marla, and much to her embarrassment was then recognised while waiting to see a doctor. A man in the waiting-room suddenly yelled, 'Oh my God, you're the virgin, you're the virgin!' Leeves says, 'I didn't know how to react! I said to the other people, "No, I'm not. At least I'm not really a virgin ... although it's not that I'm a slapper either!"'

She no longer gets identified as Seinfeld's virgin, which is just as well, for how would she explain the bump? No, these days she is associated with only one part – Daphne. And although she is not remotely dizzy like Daphne, she is well-suited to the role of housekeeper. 'I am really domestic,' she informs me. 'And I'm very British in the kitchen. I make a lovely shepherd's pie.'

Frasier, Paramount Comedy Channel, Monday-Thursday 10.00pm, Sunday 9.00pm

Amanda's a Sight for sore eyes

Amanda Redman has only once been overwhelmed by a role, to the extent that she lived, breathed and dreamed it, and fortunately it was not Detective Pryce, the pushy policewoman investigating the murder of a child in Sky One's supernatural thriller The Sight (originally entitled Shadows). In fact, it was the role of Diana Dors, which she played to great acclaim in The Blonde Bombshell, a two-part biopic for television. 'I watched every available piece of Diana Dors footage, hours and hours and hours of stuff,' Amanda recalls. 'I even watched her on Celebrity Squares [the Seventies quiz show]. It was playing all the time in my trailer, and from the moment I woke up, it would be on the video. As a result, I ended up talking like her all the time.'

By contrast, Amanda tells me that she was perfectly able to leave Pryce behind her at the end of filming, even though the subject matter was so disturbing. 'Maybe because it was more a work of science fiction than gritty reality,' she explains. She plays opposite the American actor Andrew McCarthy, who seemed much more at home, she says, with the physical demands of the script. 'Americans are much better at running and leaping than British actors,' she says. Surprisingly, she reckons that this is the first time she has ever played a policewoman. 'Yes ... yes ... I really think it is,' she says, racking her brains.

Amazing, I say, that she should get this far into a distinguished stage and screen career without playing a copper. She agrees, noncommittally. I'm not sure if she recognised the compliment. So here's a more obvious one. She is absolutely terrific in At Home with the Braithwaites, the ITV drama, soon to embark on a new series, in which she plays a downtrodden Northern housewife who wins £38m in a super-lottery. 'Thank you,' she says. 'I do think that it is such clever writing, dark yet very funny.' And so for the £38m question. Has she ever filled in a lottery ticket in real life? 'No,' she says. 'It's really not my thing.'

GREAT NEW COMEDY

DECONSTRUCTING HARRY

When Harry Enfield embarked on his new series, he was worried he might not reach the comedy heights of his earlier hits. He can relax, it's his funniest – and rudest – yet. Interview: Brian Viner

HARRY ENFIELD is unlike many comedians. In fact, he is unlike many people in all walks of life who consider themselves to be brimming with hilarious anecdotes and devastating one-liners, in that Harry has no great confidence in his talent to amuse. This seems absurd when you consider that he has created some of the most popular comic characters of the last 15 years. But it is a fact. While he was assembling material for Harry Enfield's Brand Spanking New Show, his forthcoming series for Sky One, he admits that his self-confidence wavered 'on a daily basis'.

In previous series, such as the BBC's Harry Enfield and Chums, he was able to bounce ideas off sidekicks Paul Whitehouse and Kathy Burke. But Whitehouse left to make The Fast Show, so Harry has lacked a sounding board, a person able to offer reassurance when he begins to worry, as he habitually does, that a character might not be funny enough.

'That's the trouble,' he says, with feeling. 'While I was making this there were a lot of people going, "you're great, Harry!" which was not necessarily what I needed. I don't think I walk on water. I'm under no illusions that I'm the great one. So I don't think I can get ten million viewers with Paul and Kathy, then make a new series without them, and without any of the old characters, and not expect to take a huge tumble.' For a moment Harry looks decidedly down in the dumps.

But I have some reassurance for him. From the preview tapes I have seen, I can testify that Harry Enfield's Brand Spanking New Show is very funny indeed. It is a good deal darker, ruder and more adult than anything he has done before, and obviously this represents a gamble. But there are some wonderful new characters, among them 'Short Bloke' (right, bottom), who makes up for his lack of height with a surfeit of aggression, and is always finding insults where none exist. Then there are

SKY ONE

MONDAYS FROM 11TH

Harry's own favourites, notably the 'People Think We're Sisters' duo, in which he plays a middle-aged slapper with delusions that she looks as young and pretty as her daughter. This character has been forming in his mind for years, he says.

He is also very fond of the odd couple, Kenneth (main picture) and Richard, who appear to have stepped out of a Noel Coward play. 'I really like them,' says Harry, who plays Kenneth. 'I like the way they dress and the things they talk about, like Anthony Quayle – there are a lot of references to Anthony Quayle – and the Rank Organisation. And I really like the way they get things out of all proportion.' Are they meant to be gay? 'Oh no. Absolutely not. Goodness me, no. They just happen to share a flat. In fact there's one episode in which I seduce Patsy Kensit, and Liam Gallagher threatens to give me the biffing of my life. Which is a bit out of date, I suppose, now that they've split up.'

Liam and Patsy are not the only contemporary icons celebrated in the new series. He also plays a character called Jeremy, who not only gives politicians a hard time, but loudly hurls obscenities at them. Harry's notion being that the great man, Jeremy Paxman, famous for speaking his mind, is finally saying what he really, really thinks.

Another character, called Chris Great (left, top), is a red-haired DJ who owns his own radio station. You do not have to be Miss Marple to recognise that Chris Great might just be inspired by Chris Evans, nor would it be too presumptuous to conclude that Harry is no fan of the ginger one. He denies this. 'I don't dislike Chris Evans at all. I quite like Chris Evans. I just find it interesting the way he humiliates everyone and they put up with it. Also, if you are going to have a go at someone, make sure it's someone who can get their own back. Someone who's rich and can put up with it.'

In the past, Harry's characters have been based more on types rather than individuals, even though a lot of people claim to have inspired Tim Nice-But-Dim (which seems to me to be an association one would want to keep quiet about). 'He really wasn't based on anybody in particular,' says Harry. 'There was a time when I was going out with someone who had lots of friends in the City. I would be introduced to them, and even though Stavros and Loadsamoney were big news at the time, they would say, "Hello, what do you do?" And I couldn't say, "I'm all over the papers every day," because they were too nice. So I'd just say, "I'm a comedian", which floored them. They wanted me to say, "I'm in futures," or at least that I played golf, which I don't.'

Harry chuckles. And it seems to me that once the new series is under way, winning friends and influencing people, he will have even more to chuckle about.

GREAT NEW COMEDY

AL SERVES IT

How did an Oxford graduate find fame playing a bigotted pub landlord? Nick Griffiths shares a few pints with Al Murray to find out.

PICTURE the scene: there's a couple in the corner of the pub, he's huge, she's tiny, neither are speaking; there's also a bespectacled quiz whiz nursing an everlasting pint of bitter; a loutish chap breaking wind into his stool; a dim-witted barman; and an Aussie barmaid. And then there's the landlord, a shaven-headed, incredibly opinionated man convinced that Britain is still Great.

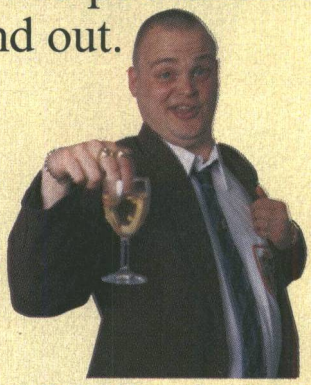
If these characters sound like the regulars of your local, then that's because Time Gentlemen Please – the new 13-part sitcom starring Al Murray, Pub Landlord – is so well observed.

Though you may know neither the comedian (Murray) nor his stand-up persona (Landlord), they have been treading the boards as one since 1994, gathering three Perrier Award nominations before last year's eventual win. There have been triumphant, extended runs in the West End, and Murray even scooped the British Guild of Beer Drinkers Award for Humorous Writing About Beer. 'I was offered a couple of pubs to run after that,' says Murray. 'No, it's an act!'

People often blur the distinction between creator and creation. The Landlord is a fervent nationalist, cursed by ignorance. Murray is an ex-public school boy and Oxford history graduate. 'There are two wrong ends of the stick,' he says. 'There are people who go, "You're right about the French, mate," and you think, "But everything I said was stupid." And there are people who go, "You're the same as the National Front." And you think, "Well, I'm not. It says comedy on the ticket."'

There was once a near punch-up. A drunk grabbed Murray by the tie. 'There was a moment's stand-off and I said, "You don't know what's going on, do you?" He went, "No" and sat down again.'

Murray is a curiously defensive interviewee, particularly concerning his education. 'To knock someone for the school they went to is profoundly crass,' he says. 'I think it's awful. I've never got involved in all that. When I was nine, I did not want to be sent to boarding school. That may sound unbelievable to some people, but it's true. So when I'm 32, for someone to go, "Yeah, but you had a public school education" is a bit unimaginative as an argument.' So, was the Landlord a statement to your parents that you could be uncouth? 'No. I don't live in a reactive state to my upbringing.'



PHOTOS: SIMON ROWE

UP!

The character was actually born of necessity. Murray was working at the Edinburgh Festival with friend Harry Hill, in the comedy band Pub Internationale. They needed a compere – fast. Murray invented the Landlord. And he intends to play the character for many years more, in a sitcom that trounces most other new comedy output.

Figures floating around have included £3m for the deal, with £1m for Murray's pocket. 'The £3m is for making 13 programmes: director, cast, studio, etc. I'm not going to pocket millions. But the taxman'll read that, as will various skint relatives. I've been able to buy a house – though I'm mortgaged to the eyeballs – and a nice new car. I'm buying it today. Passat. Boring family car.'

What would the Landlord drive? 'He'd have a Capri up on bricks in the beer garden, and he maybe drives a Cavalier, or a Jag. I've never had to think about that. He never leaves the pub, you see.'

Pretty woman: Laura San Giacomo (above) takes her character Maya Gallo seriously, despite having lots of laughs on set

Shooting stars

The fourth series of US media sitcom Just Shoot Me premieres this month, confirming its American wise-cracks have hit the spot with UK audiences. Lawrie Masterson shares the joke with its award-winning cast

WRITTEN and produced by Steven Levitan, of Frasier and The Larry Sanders Show fame, riotous media satire Just Shoot Me is currently in the top 20 American shows and is threatening to topple other hit US sitcoms in the ratings war. Set in the New York offices of a fashion magazine, Levitan's comic hit relies on the strength of its award-winning cast. Its core members talk me through the quirks of their characters in Los Angeles, where the series is filmed. Reputedly there is as much laughter on-set as on-screen and they are all in jocular mood.

'Am I the centre of everything?' says movie veteran George Segal, who plays Jack Gallo, publisher of fictional magazine Blush. 'The answer is yes. I was thought of first and there would be no show without me.' Saturday Night Live comedian David Spade continues the joshing about his character, Segal's power-hungry assistant, Dennis Finch. 'He's kind of wise-cracking, kind of short ... there is no difference between him and me. We even comb our hair the same.'

Enrico Colantoni stars as photographer Elliott DiMauro, who has never taken a picture and is far more interested in seducing his would-be female subjects. Wendie Malick, plays Nina Van Horn, and Laura San Giacomo is Gallo's rebellious daughter Maya. San Giacomo, whose movie credits include sex, lies and videotape and Pretty Woman, takes a slightly more serious tone than her co-stars on the subject of her character. Maya Gallo has actually studied journalism, San Giacomo explains, and has written hard news, but it's something of a comedown to be working for her serial bridegroom father at Blush.

The father-daughter relationship is the aspect of Just Shoot Me which San Giacomo particularly enjoys. 'I think we try to keep that relationship honest so that there's funny stuff that happens around it, but there's still that idea that I need his approval and there's that soft spot of me wanting him to love me,' she says. 'We can just touch on that once in a while, which is great.'

According to Spade, Just Shoot Me hangs together because the characters are so different, and room is made for each of them to feature strongly.

'There is a reason to watch everybody ... but at the same time the whole show is solid,' he explains.

Segal adds: 'We all feel fortunate in that everybody seems to be on the same page all the time. There's so much rubbish that you do in the course of a career that when the good stuff comes along you really know it.'

Segal, 66, is not just the elder statesman of the cast, but also an arbiter of sorts.

San Giacomo says a laugh from him is enough to convince her a scene has worked. 'If you hear George laughing on another part of the set at something you've done, then it has the Segal stamp of approval, which is like a higher authority,' she says.

DAREDEVIL KING

Evel Knievel was the ultimate stunt performer. But he still bears the physical reminders of his exploits. Words: Mark Hawthorne

MUHAMMAD Ali rumbled in the jungle with George Foreman and West Germany ran away with the World Cup. But neither can claim to be the biggest sporting event of 1974. On 8 September of that year, American television stations stopped screening breaking news from the Watergate scandal for three hours so the viewing audience could watch a 35-year-old redneck named Robert Knievel – but better known to the world as Evel – launch himself across Idaho's Snake River Canyon in a 'rocket cycle' capable of 400 miles per hour.

The fate of former President Richard Nixon hung in the balance, but all America wanted to know was 'would Evel make it?'

It remains the third most-watched live television event in US history, nestled amid a brace of Superbowls. Such was the hype that President Gerald Ford waited until that day to pardon Richard Nixon. 'Ford later told me he knew I'd get so much publicity he wouldn't get so much steam for doing it,' Knievel said.

Some say it was the most daring stunt ever attempted. Others say it was the greatest publicity stunt of all time. Which ever way you look at it, on that sunny day in 1974, Evel Knievel jumped his way into history as the king of daredevils. He also earned a cheque for $6m – not bad for a stunt that failed – and a reputation as the maddest man to ever pull on leathers.

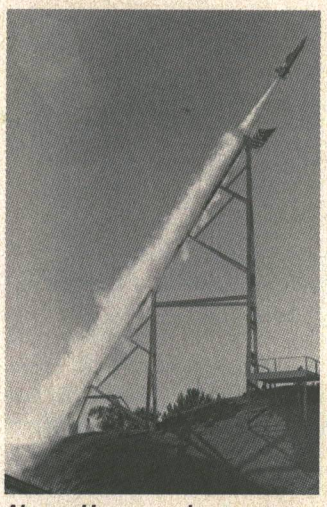
The record books show that Knievel cheated death that day. His parachute opened early and his 'rocket cycle' landed just yards away from the river, where he would surely have drowned, at the bottom of the canyon. But cheating death is part of the Knievel folklore.

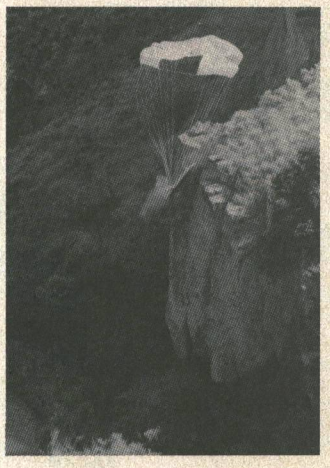
During his daredevil career, Knievel fractured 35 different bones several hundred times. The man himself has lost count, but he does know he has spent three years of his life in hospital.

Robert Craig Knievel was born in Butte, Montana, on October 17, 1938. As a youngster, he dreamed of a career as a professional motorcycle rider, but lacked the money, sponsorship and – some say – speed to ever make it.

Eventually, Knievel had the idea of putting together a motorcycle stunt show, and soon took his act to the one town in the world where a flying-daredevil would fit right in: Hollywood.

Knievel finally made his name by trying to clear the fountain of Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas on New Year's Day, 1968. It was a spectacular failure. Knievel sailed more than 50 feet through the air, clearing the fountain comfortably, but his Harley Davidson bucked like a wild bull on impact. Knievel skidded more than 165ft before coming to a stop.





Above: Up, up and away. Knievel's 'rocket cycle' blasts off as the daredevil attempts to jump Snake River. Below: Moments later, Knievel cheats death

As a result of that crash, Knievel's left leg is three-quarters of an inch shorter than his right and he must walk with a cane. It also made him a household name.

Jumping the Grand Canyon was his dream, but the Navajo Indians refused to let him land on their side. So Knievel leased his own canyon – a mile-wide, 600-foot deep crevice over the Snake River in Idaho – for $37,000, and the maddest money-making scheme in history was born.

For a full week in 1974, as 50,000 motorcyclists gathered at Snake Canyon to see if he would live or die, Knievel was front-page news. With the world watching, he was lifted into his 'rocket cycle' and prepared himself to push the launch button.

'When I got down to three I said 'God take care of me ... then punched the fire button,' he recalls. 'Then I tried to jump a river canyon. I missed it.

'But you know what? In 26 years not one daredevil has been game enough to repeat it. Now that says something.' About the sanity of Robert Craig Knievel, yes, it does.

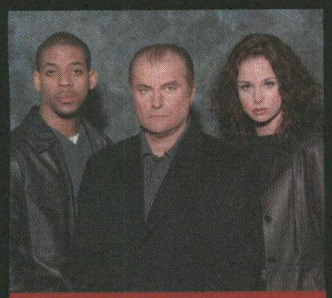
THE BIG NUMBER CHANGES

The Burnside issue



ITV2

BURNSIDE
WEEKDAYS FROM
MONDAY 25TH, 9.00PM

He may be known to millions as the ultimate tough copper, DCI Burnside, but, offscreen, actor Chris Ellison insists he's really a sensitive family man.

Words: Lucia Green

TELEVISION tough guy Chris Ellison has a confession to make. He goes shopping with his wife and, what's more, he enjoys it! 'Yeah, she goes clothes shopping and I go with her and we choose together. I am very patient and I am interested. I am a good husband like that,' he grins. The very thought of Frank Burnside shopping with a female doesn't bear thinking about. But then, he and Burnside are, he insists, very different.

Just how different depends on circumstances and mood. Catch him over a leisurely lunch and he can be entertaining and even endearing. He will reflect affectionately on his family and home life and swap recipes – his speciality is Greek dishes. People in the street shake his hand and he's pleased as punch.

But catch him in his somewhat scruffy trailer, during filming, and at times you feel you're with The Bill's former hard man, whose unconventional methods and freezing stare have earned him his own spin-off series – ITV2's Burnside.

In this excellent six-parter, Burnside is now a DCI in the National Crime Squad dealing with gun running, money laundering, drugs and a serial rapist. 'It's a lot more sophisticated than Sun Hill. He doesn't really fit in. He conforms up to a point and then goes off and does what he wants, know what I mean?' He grins and sounds much like his character.

Chris Ellison has gone to great lengths to stop Burnside being changed. 'A lot of the scriptwriters don't remember him in his prime. So I've had to remind them,' he says. 'His humour is very sharp. You had to keep that – and his one-liners. I've had to have words about that! We don't want a watered down, politically correct version of Burnside, because I tell you what, I wouldn't want to play him. It would be dull, and if Burnside becomes dull, we've had it. The day I get bored with him I will bury him,' he laughs.

And another thing, there won't be any romance for his character. He looks horrified at the thought. 'I don't want any of that stuff. All that rubbish, rolling around on a bed!' He finds it hard to understand that women might find his character even remotely sexy. 'I suppose they feel safe with him because he is protective and people admire him in a funny sort of way. He hates political correctness, he says what he thinks, he doesn't give a monkeys. People like that, including me. That's where we are similar. I hate all this PC stuff. It makes life dull. The Bill used to be more fun before people were so careful what they said and did on screen.'

Ellison admits that, like his character, he also lacks patience, and can be volatile. 'I get impatient if people don't do their job properly, but I'm not a monster. I'm not a bully. And I have never shoved anybody's head down a loo,' he chuckles.

He likes to think he is a lot more sensitive than his character. He and his wife, Anita, have two children, Louis, 18, and ten-year-old Francesca. 'Anita's more strict than I am. I'm hopeless, occasionally I'll lose my temper, but I hate confrontations. I'm upset for days afterwards.'

Ellison may like to distance himself from his screen image, but Frank Burnside has provided him with a lovely five-bedroom house in Hove, East Sussex, and a comfortable lifestyle, where, apart from cooking and shopping, he paints and sails and enjoys his afternoon siesta. Now, could you imagine Burnside having an afternoon nap?

Actress Zoe Eeles, who plays his feisty side-kick in Burnside, admits she had preconceived ideas about Ellison. 'I thought he'd be like his character, a big, hard man. But he's not like that at all. He's a big pussy cat. He made me laugh all the time. He's a charmer. I didn't think we'd have so much fun.

'But there are similarities – he can be quite a stubborn man, but he's so charming with it you forgive him.'

A family affair

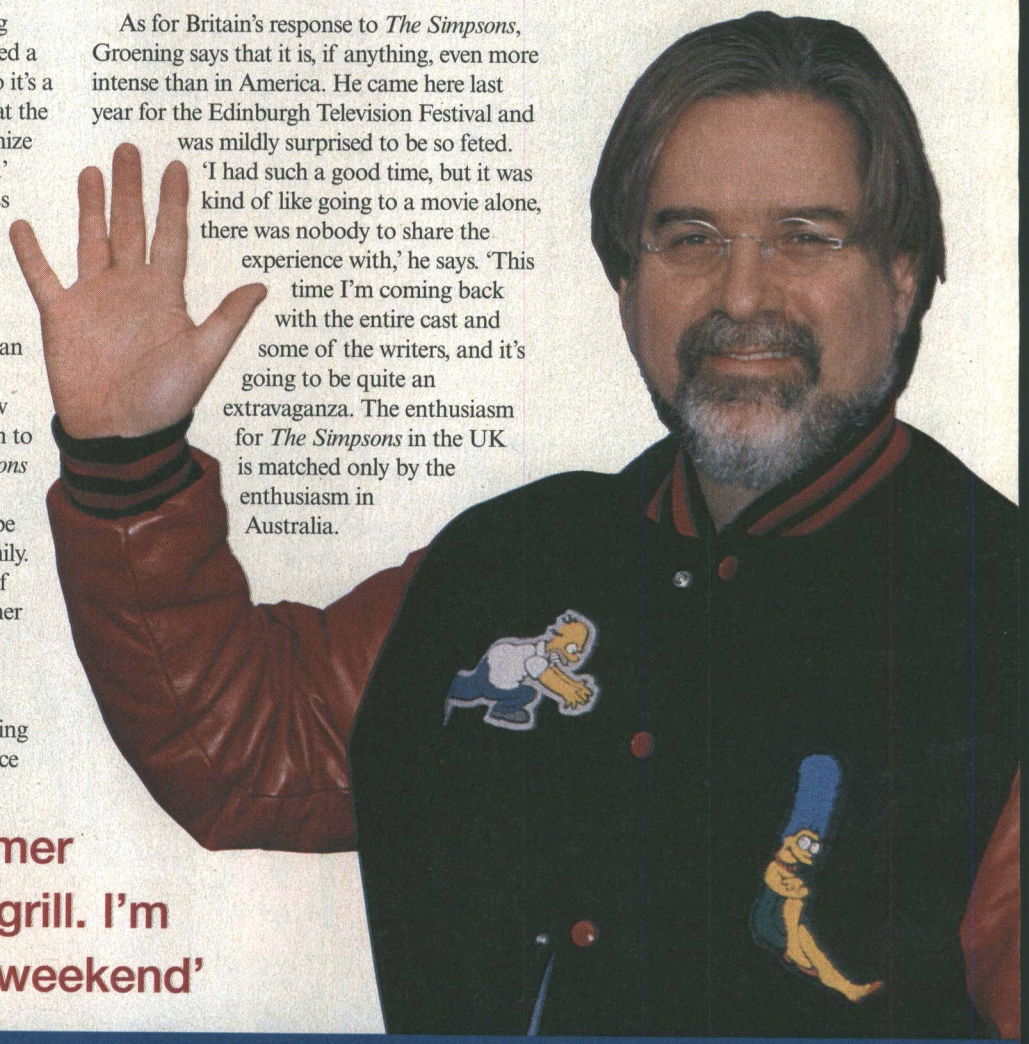
On the eve of a visit to the UK to mark ten years of The Simpsons, the hit show's creator, Matt Groening, talks about success and his British comic influences. Interview: Brian Viner

FIRST things first. Has Matt Groening (pronounced Gray-ning) ever consulted a psychotherapist? 'Sure, I live in LA so it's a requirement,' he says wryly. 'But not at the moment. Psychotherapy just helps to reorganize your neuroses in alphabetical order, that's all.'

Smart answer. We would expect nothing less from the creator of The Simpsons, whose genius, I am delighted to report, is untainted by arrogance. Better still, he is gently self-deprecating and generous with his time, two qualities I haven't encountered before in an American television heavyweight. He talks happily for nigh on an hour, and tells me how much he is looking forward to visiting Britain to celebrate the tenth anniversary of The Simpsons – the cartoon characters who challenge the Windsors and the Kennedys for the right to be called the world's favourite dysfunctional family.

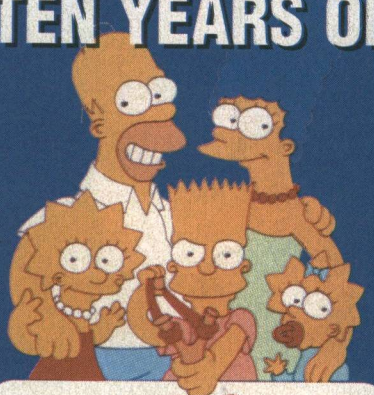
Britain has provided Groening with some of his most cherished comic influences. 'My father used to keep copies of Punch and I loved the cartoons of Rowland Emett. Real cool stuff. And I enjoy reading Thackeray and PG Wodehouse. And, as with everyone else working in comedy, Monty Python was a huge influence on me. The Beatles were pretty funny, too.'

As for Britain's response to The Simpsons, Groening says that it is, if anything, even more intense than in America. He came here last year for the Edinburgh Television Festival and was mildly surprised to be so feted. 'I had such a good time, but it was kind of like going to a movie alone, there was nobody to share the experience with,' he says. 'This time I'm coming back with the entire cast and some of the writers, and it's going to be quite an extravaganza. The enthusiasm for The Simpsons in the UK is matched only by the enthusiasm in Australia.



'I've just seen a Homer Simpson barbecue grill. I'm going to test it this weekend'

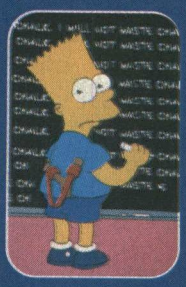
TEN YEARS OF THE SIMPSONS



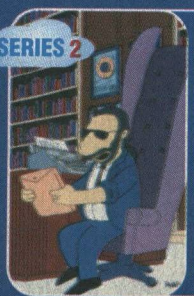
SERIES 1 Nuclear power plant worker Homer Simpson and his dysfunctional family, wife Marge and children Bart, Lisa and Maggie, are unleashed on the world. There is a series of short cartoons before Series One begins.

Series Highlight: A naked Homer is mistaken for Bigfoot during a family holiday in 'The Call of the Simpsons'.

Bart's Blackboard Classic: I WILL NOT WASTE CHALK – 'Bart the Genius'



SERIES 2



Series Highlight: In a bid to stop Bart's budding daredevil career, Homer fails gloriously in his attempt to jump the Smithfield Gorge on a skateboard, in 'Bart the Daredevil'.

Famous Guest Voice: Ringo Starr (as himself) writes to Marge, after she paints his portrait in 'Brush with Greatness'.

Bart's Blackboard Classic: I WILL NOT SELL SCHOOL PROPERTY – 'Bart Gets Hit by a Car'

SERIES 3 Series Highlight: In 'Colonel Homer', Homer's love for Marge is tested when he falls for a country singer whose songs include I'm Basting a Turkey with My Tears and Don't Look Up My Dress Unless You Mean It.

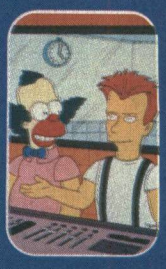
Famous Guest Voice: When Bart pretends to be stranded down a well in 'Radio Bart', Sting (as himself) spearheads a campaign to save him.

Bart's Blackboard Classic: NOBODY LIKES SUNBURN SLAPPERS – 'When Flanders Failed'



Time flies when you're having fun: ten terrific years with all the crazy folks from Springfield

I don't know why. Maybe because they're laughing at America.' Maybe. Although The Simpsons also demonstrates America's ability to laugh at itself. And this, in a way, is Groening's most enduring achievement.

Harry Shearer, who provides the voice of Montgomery Burns, among others, sums it up. 'Matt has achieved the impossible,' he tells me. 'He has made a grotesquely comfortable living by subverting all that America is supposed to cherish.' The same point was made, less admiringly, by President George Bush, who once called on Americans to be less like The Simpsons and more like The Waltons. He shouldn't have tangled with Groening, who scripted Homer's immediate riposte to the effect that Americans were already just like the Waltons: waiting for the recession to pass.

Groening is a very smart cookie. Little did he realize, though, when he devised The Simpsons to fill a segment on Fox's The Tracey Ullman Show that he was forging an institution that would make him and his employers exceedingly rich. It is estimated that The Simpsons has generated close to $1bn for Rupert Murdoch's News Corporation, Fox's parent company. Merchandising alone earns vast revenue, and I ask Groening to name the most outlandish example. 'I've just seen a Homer Simpson barbecue grill. I'm going to test it this weekend,' he chuckles.

Considering the golden goose that The Simpsons is now, it's no wonder Murdoch agreed when the casting director called, heart just possibly in mouth, to ask if he would do the voice of an evil billionaire. 'Rupert was a really good sport,' he says, confirming that Murdoch was paid the usual rate, around $2000. Among other good sports to have lent their voices to The Simpsons or Futurama, Groening's other hit show, are scientist Stephen Hawking and Vice-President Al Gore. 'We've asked Bill Clinton, too, but so far he's said no.'

Perhaps Clinton will agree when he leaves the White House. Whatever, Groening has made remarkable strides from working at a pizza place to giving jobs to media moguls and swapping jibes with presidents. However, if he could have foreseen The Simpsons' success, he says, he would not have named the characters after his family. 'It seemed like an amusing quirk at the time but it has become kind of a burden. My father, who died a few years ago, never had a problem with it except when Homer got Marge to carry a spare tyre back to the gas station. Strangling Bart was okay, but he thought that was ungentlemanly. 'Actually, my mother is called Margaret. But the funny thing is that her friends call her Marge now and claim that it has been her name all along, which it hasn't.'

On the whole, though, Mrs Groening does not mind being recognised, as she often is in her hometown of Portland, Oregon, as the basis for Marge. 'People are more inclined to help her with groceries,' explains her 46-year-old son. She must be proud of him.

Why we love The Simpsons

JENNY ECLAIR (Comedienne)

I love The Simpsons but my 12-year-old daughter Phoebe lives it. She'd like nothing better than to be adopted by a Simpson and leave home! The concept of the show is so different to what normally comes out of the US. It's about failure and the Americans don't like failure. There's much more to it than being funny.

Fave character: Marge.

Phoebe's top moment: When Grandpa Simpson's friend Jasper says, 'Who's shot who in the what now?' in 'Who Shot Mr Burns Part Two'.

GORDEN KAYE (Actor)

It's much more than just a cartoon. The detail is wonderful. I love those notices that flash on the screen. You have to be quick. There was the one for the old peoples' home. It said, 'Just a short walk from the cemetery.'

Fave character: Bart first, then Homer.

Top moment: Bart and Lisa go to a festival of file films, those library clips that are used on the TV news when you haven't got shots of the real thing. The very idea is just so daft!

STEWART LEE (Comedian)

It is simply the best TV series ever made. It works for kids and adults, which is about as good as it gets. The Simpsons does all sorts of things people say isn't possible, again and again! George Bush actually used The Simpsons in his election campaign as a bad role model – his Administration was going to make sure Americans didn't have to end up like the Simpsons. Anything that provokes that kind of political reaction has to be good.

Fave character: Homer.

Top moment: Homer going into space. One moment he is eating all these crisps and they're flying all over the place and then four seconds later it's really serious. I'd just like to be up there with him.

ADAM BLOOM (Comedian)

It gets you right in the guts, doesn't it? The show has a moral outlook but it manages never to be patronising.

Fave character: I can't choose one. It's like being asked to say which is your favourite child.

Top moment: Homer tries to remove a sweet stuck to a girl's bum and gets accused of sexual harassment. He's on TV, in the papers, everywhere Homer's getting stick. Just like OJ Simpson.

CHARLIE DIMMOCK (TV gardener)

It makes me laugh more than anything else on TV. It really is my favourite.

Fave character: Homer.

Top moment: That's hard because watching The Simpsons it all blends into one amazing experience!

STUART ORGAN (Actor)

Anything that takes a satirical line on American politics and gets away with it on American TV has to be exceptional.

Fave character: Marge.

Top moment: Lisa comes up against a girl at school who's smarter than her. She and Marge have a serious mother-daughter chat. Then Marge says: 'Honey, I do know how you feel. I always thought I had the tallest hair, but that visit to Graceland really opened my eyes.'

JIM BOWEN (Host of Bullseye)

It's brilliantly written, and, quite simply, hilarious. We'd all die for that kind of material, but probably only animated characters could make it work anyway.

Fave character: Bart.

Top moment: The Simpson Shuffle in front of the sofa. They all line up and do that strut in one direction, then the other and then they all sit down in a row with their arms folded.

RORY UNDERWOOD (Former England rugby international)

Well they're just the tops, aren't they? Funniest thing on TV.

Fave character: Homer.

Top moment: I think it's that anguished yell of Homer's. I actually wait for it during the shows, every time he cries out it gets me.

Interviews: Hilary Bonner

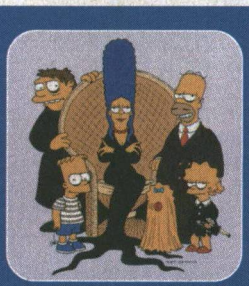
PHOTOS: MICHAEL BIRT, NIALL MCDIARMID/KATZ PICTURES, NILS JORGANSEN, MIKE LAWN/REX FEATURES, CHRIS TAYLOR/RETNA, RICHARD STONE PARTNERSHIP, JUSTINE BOHAN, BBC

SERIES 8 Series Highlight: 'The Simpsons Spin-off Showcase', a bizarre trio of spin-offs featuring Simpsons characters, including 'The Simpsons Family Smile-Time Variety Hour', in which the Simpsons dress up as a clan of beavers and Fifties teenyboppers.

Famous Guest Voices: Gillian Anderson (Dana Scully) and David Duchovny (Fox Mulder) are called in to investigate Homer's drunken sighting of an alien in 'The Springfield Files'.

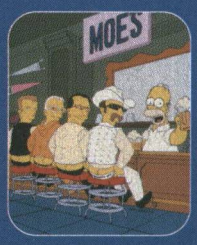
Bart's Blackboard Classic: A FIRE DRILL DOES NOT DEMAND A FIRE – 'The Canine Mutiny'

SERIES 9



Series Highlight: Tales of horror in 'Treehouse of Horrors VIII'. Homer survives a six-megaton blast, Bart's DNA gets mixed with a fly's and there's the first Halloween, Simpson-style!

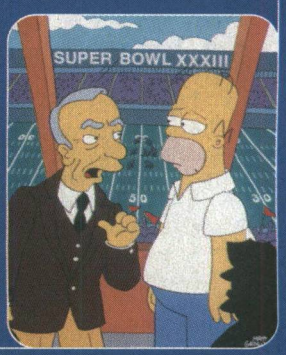
Famous Guest Voices: The band members of U2 and comedian Steve Martin star in 'Trash of the Titans', the all-star special 200th episode.



Bart's Blackboard Classic: THERE WAS NOT A ROMAN GOD NAMED 'FARTACUS' – 'Reality Bites'

SERIES 10 Series Highlight: In 'Lisa Gets an A', Homer gets emotionally attached to a lobster that he is trying to fatten up, while Lisa does the unthinkable and cheats at school.

Famous Guest Voices: Dolly Parton, Rupert Murdoch and numerous others star (as themselves) in 'Sunday, Cruddy Sunday'.



Bart's Blackboard Classic: I DO NOT HAVE DIPLOMATIC IMMUNITY – 'Make Room For Lisa'

ANALYZE THIS
FROM MONDAY 25TH

Analyzing De

WILL we ever be able to understand the enigma that is Robert De Niro? The 57-year-old double-Oscar winner is generally regarded as one of the finest screen actors ever – he has committed some of the most intense and intelligent performances to film, yet ask him to talk about his many memorable portrayals, and you're lucky to get a word out of him. The consummate Method actor, De Niro completely submerges himself in his roles, yet always seems uncomfortable when he's being himself. And while classic De Niro characters, such as the mohawked avenging angel Travis Bickle in Taxi Driver and the overweight, brutal former boxing champ Jake La Motta in Raging Bull, are etched into the public consciousness, the actor could pass unnoticed on the street.

His exhaustive, some might say obsessive, preparation for his roles is legendary: for Raging Bull he gained over 60lbs in weight to play the bloated, down-on-his-luck La Motta of the later scenes, and earned an Academy Award for his troubles; for Taxi Driver, the actor drove a cab around the sort of seedy areas that are on Travis Bickle's hellish route; and for the epic musical drama New York New York, De Niro insisted on learning to play the saxophone, even though he mimed to a pre-recorded track during filming.

On the day we meet, his eyes are furtive, he has a dry cough and wears a dark blue button-down shirt over slacks, which he continually smoothes with his hands. He seems incredibly awkward and ill at ease. Yet earlier I had watched him on screen at a preview of this month's Front Row premiere Analyze This. He was imposing and self-assured as mob boss Paul Vitti in this sharply comic look at the criminal underworld – a region De Niro inhabited in The Godfather Part II, Goodfellas, Casino and The Untouchables.

This time, though, his tough guy gets so stricken by anxiety that he has to see a caring shrink called Ben, played by Billy Crystal. He's so pleased with his session on the psychiatrist's couch, that he demands to be seen whenever he chooses. And who is Ben to argue?

Even though Ben and fiancée Laura (Friends star, Lisa Kudrow) are attempting to organize their wedding, Vitti's demands must come first. The hapless Ben becomes privy to too many secrets for his own good, including knowledge that his mobster client 'seeks closure' against an enemy, played by Chazz Palminteri (with whom De Niro worked on A Bronx Tale).

So it is difficult to believe that the confident star of Analyze This is the same that sits before me now in a private suite at the Excelsior Hotel, Venice, fidgeting nervously. After all, isn't nervousness what this intense actor usually inspires in other people – his co-stars, directors and fans?

'Maybe people treat me with a bit too much reverence,' he admits. 'It goes away after a while, of course. It cannot sustain itself for too long if you're working with people.'

He ponders: 'Do you think that it's possible to work with someone like Billy Crystal without laughter? It's not. It was the same with Robin Williams [in Awakenings]. These guys just start up from nowhere and begin kidding around between takes. I like having fun on a film set, but some people think I always take it deadly seriously. I had great times with Kenneth Branagh on Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, particularly when my character [the monster] had to roll around in gallons of KY Jelly.

'But I just wish I had the talent to talk, like they do, away from the film set. Look at Dustin Hoffman. I always envy the way he can speak and be smart and funny and so on. I just can't do that.'

He would probably like to reveal more about his roles in a 36-year film career, but there is a sense that he simply can't remember. 'People have asked, "How did you feel when you did this or that scene?" and I have difficulty in recalling the scene, let alone how I felt about it,' he says.

Given his talent for playing convincing gangsters and hoodlums, it would be easy to believe that De Niro's formative years were tough and took place on the wrong side of the tracks. But nothing could be further from the truth – his parents were sensitive bohemians. He was raised in the Little Italy area of New York by his mother, painter Virginia Admiral, after she divorced his father, Robert, a painter, sculptor and poet of some renown on the beatnik scene of the Fifties. De Niro was a teenager in the early Sixties and was known around the neighbourhood as Bobby Milk, because of his pale skin. But he was more likely to be carrying a book than a knife, as he launched an acting career in small-time theatre, before making his film debut in 1964 in The Wedding Party, a gleefully experimental student effort, released in 1969, and directed by a young Brian De Palma.

De Niro is a notoriously private person and refuses to discuss scandal sheet stories concerning his complex love life.

So this leads us to the conclusion that De Niro can lose himself in widely varying roles because he is living a wildly different, private life away from them. And he is enjoying the joke.

He played priests in True Confessions and Sleepers, and his criminal characters in The Gang that Couldn't Shoot Straight and We're No Angels donned dog collars to pose as members of the clergy, but he admits: 'I am not religious and don't go to church. I like the idea of priests, because they are not supposed to violate certain laws and rules. It does not mean that they stick to the straight and narrow, of course. They stray, as you can see in the papers. I love the papers in Britain – always full of stories like that.'

De Niro gives a knowing smile. 'Things,' he says, 'are never quite what they seem.'

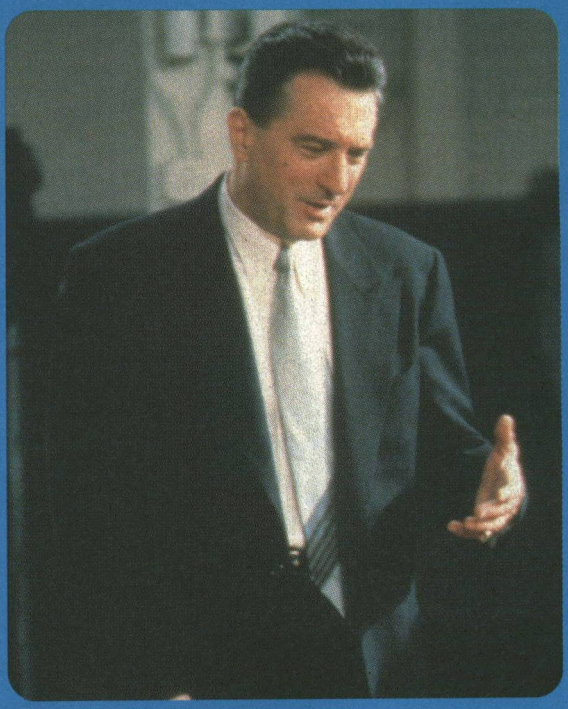
Spotlight on Robert De Niro



This month's premiere of the witty mob comedy Analyze This plays like an extended tribute to its star Robert De Niro. It is crammed full of hilarious genre in-jokes, such as when De Niro wise-cracks about a scene in The Godfather involving Don Vito Corleone (Marlon Brando) and his cowardly son Fredo (John Cazale) – De Niro, of course, played the young Vito Corleone in The Godfather Part II and starred alongside Cazale in The Deer Hunter. But, for all its knowing humour and earthy language, Analyze This has an endearing old-fashioned quality, and, what's more, a real heart of gold.

Incredible artwork, memorable characters and a dark, cautionary story make the Disney classic Pinocchio the finest cartoon feature ever – and that's no lie

The greatest – no strings attached!

OVER the last ten years, the corporate heirs of Walt Disney have done such a successful job of turning out their annual, formulaic cartoon feature that it's easy to forget just how strange and masterful Uncle Walt's own movies really are. For all their entertainment value or technical virtues, the likes of The Little Mermaid, Beauty and the Beast, The Lion King, Pocahontas, Mulan and Tarzan are merely colour photocopies of the great run of work Walt Disney personally supervised between Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs in 1937 and The Jungle Book in 1967.

The funny talking animals, Americanisations of European stories, vulgar Hollywood razzmatazz and conservatism of Disney were all part of the process from the beginning. But so was an artistry on a par with pyramid-building (and impossible in these days of computers and trade unions), a maverick anarchism that was born of risk (rather than merchandise tie-ins) and, most of all, a personal feeling that informs every frame and every line of the classic films.

Pinocchio, released in 1940, and directed by Ben Sharpsteen and Hamilton Luske, is the greatest of all cartoon features. After the artistic and commercial success of Snow White, Disney put into production a follow-up, designed to top its predecessor in every department. Instead of a fairy tale, he selected a literary property, Carlo Collodi's 1881 newspaper serial, which was then thoroughly adapted to take advantage of the animation medium. In Collodi's original, Jiminy Cricket volunteers to serve as the titular wooden boy's conscience and Pinocchio squashes him underfoot; the film creates an unforgettable character for Jiminy and yet avoids the moralism of too many children's stories by having Cricket come across as a ne'er-do-well who gets the job of conscience by default and then has to live up to it.

Pinocchio UK TV Premiere
Disney Channel, Sunday 17th, 4.00pm

Pinocchio is a story of moral growth, with adulthood as the prize at the end of the adventure. There is no better contrast between the new and old Disney than the variations on a theme found in Pinocchio and The Little Mermaid: Pinocchio becomes a real boy by outgrowing his weaknesses, learning respect for others and choosing never to lie; Ariel gets her legs by rebelling against her father. Unlike resolutely innocuous modern-day Disney films, Pinocchio has the merciless streak of classic fairy tales, as when Lampwick, the adolescent beer drinker and pool player, whose idea of a good time is breaking windows in a darkly surreal theme park, is horrifically turned into a donkey and sold into the salt mines. Pinocchio learns from his example, but Lampwick is never rescued. The puppet's road to humanity is littered with ordeals, most memorably the gigantic Monstro the Whale. No grown-up horror movies of the Forties remain as terrifying as the scary sequences of Pinocchio.

The Disney name became associated with squeaky clean entertainment in the Fifties, but in the early days no compromises were made with the material in the name of family viewing. Pinocchio is richly animated throughout but also has a surprising earthiness and sensuality: The Blue Fairy who breathes life into the hero is a vision of loveliness, and the affectionate but understandably nervous relationship between

KIM NEWMAN ON ... PINOCCHIO

Figaro the cat and Cleo the goldfish is extremely bizarre. The film has gorgeous backgrounds, a collection of perfectly realised characters, including the loveable Geppetto, Pinocchio's creator and adoptive father (pictured left, inset, and below, with Pinocchio), the best-ever score for an animated musical, and a plot that never stops for unnecessary animal routines, gags or production numbers.

The apex of the Disney cartoon features, Pinocchio also cleared the way for the excellence of Dumbo and Bambi. Its virtues have persisted beyond many re-releases and spurious sequels like Pinocchio in Outer Space, Pinocchio and the Emperor of the Night and the recent live-action The Adventures of Pinocchio. It's a true classic, capable of holding the interest through dozens of child-mandated reviewings on video, with a real sense of the wonders and terrors of the world outside its fairy tale setting.

JOSS ACKLAND

What movie inspired you to become an actor?
When I was a kid I saw Of Mice and Men. I saw it eight times in one week when I was evacuated in Bedford. This is what made me long to get into movies. Unfortunately, I had no contacts and when I did get into a movie called Seven Days to Noon (1950), I had 48 takes and so didn't do another movie for years.

What's your favourite movie?
I could say something like Heimat but that's a bit long at around 16 hours. I love Robert Altman movies, and those by Hitchcock, Frank Capra, Kurosawa. I do think there are some great directors around now. I also like John Boorman and Jane Campion.

Who's your favourite actor?
My hero was always Ralph Richardson because you could never see the wheels go round. I think Gerard Depardieu is marvellous, Marcello Mastroianni, Robert Mitchum. I think Night of the Hunter was one of the great movies of all time and it was terribly sad for Charles Laughton because it was cast aside.

Of your own movies, which is your particular favourite?
White Mischief. I play a wealthy Kenyan ex-pat and Greta Scacchi is my straying wife. It was an interesting role to play because it was all concealed. That's what I like about movies. The more you conceal the more interesting it is. Acting's terribly simple. All you do is find the character. As the expression goes, 'Find the man, discover the man, know the man, become the man and say the lines.'

SPORTS OLYMPICS

British Eurosport's leading commentators select Great Britain's best medal prospects at Sydney 2000. By Neil Martin

MARK ROBSON faces a task almost as daunting as actually competing in the Olympics when he fronts British Eurosport's comprehensive coverage from Sydney.

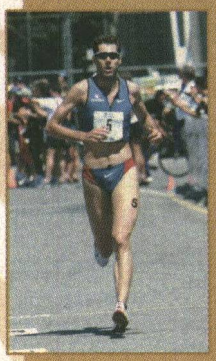
The channel will be broadcasting 24-hours-a-day throughout the Games, with Robson holding it all together as anchorman in the studio. 'It's really exciting for me, and it's a great honour to be presenting the coverage of the Olympics,' he explains. 'I've been doing all my homework, because we'll be showing all different sports, and there won't be any danger of someone missing out on their moment of glory just because they are not well known at the moment.

'I really hope there will be someone who comes out of the shadows and does really well, like the shooter Malcolm Cooper [who put shooting on the map when he won gold in the three-position small-bore rifle event at the 1984 Olympics].

'But I will be talking to all our athletes at the Olympic Village before the Games start to find out their personal ambitions, because if they surpass those but don't get a medal, that's still a great story,' Robson adds. 'Specifically, I'm looking forward to the rowing to see if Steve Redgrave can win his fifth gold on the trot, as well as the tennis, where I think Tim Henman could do quite well.'

TRIATHLON

GREAT BRITAIN'S first medal is expected to go to Simon Lessing (pictured) – and it could very well be gold. Lessing is competing in the men's triathlon, the event's first appearance as an Olympic sport, and Nick Fellows is confident Lessing can continue his domination of this tough discipline. 'Simon has been the dominant force in triathlon for ten years and has won five world championships,' Fellows says. 'It would be a shock if he didn't get a medal, and my money would be on him winning the gold. He is experienced, knows the opposition inside out and won't be perturbed by any psychological games.'



The triathlon consists of a 1.5km swim, followed by a 40km bike ride and a 10km run – all of which together should take under two hours to complete.

BOXING

YOU'VE got to admire Steve Holdsworth's courage in telling British super-heavyweight Audley Harrison he won't win gold at the Olympics. 'He has a chance of a medal,' Holdsworth explains. 'But there is an open draw in boxing; he could meet his toughest opponent in the first round and that would be it, so he would need some luck to win the gold.'

Harrison is one of only two British boxers to have qualified for the Olympics, alongside light-heavyweight Courtney Fry, which Holdsworth finds disappointing but entirely reflective of the poor state of the sport in this country at present. For Fry to do well, he will have to adapt his style to ensure that he does well in the computer scoring sytem that will decide the Olympic bouts.

'Whether Courtney can change his style is debatable, but he has as good a chance as anyone for the gold. But the Ukrainians and the Russians are really the ones to beat in Sydney,' Holdsworth says.

GOLD

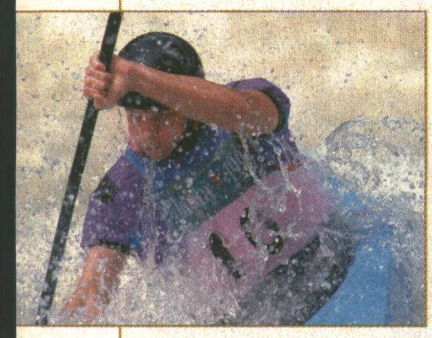
STEVE REDGRAVE is in line to rewrite Olympic history by winning his fifth successive gold medal in Sydney. Redgrave's victory as part of the dominant men's four boat – which also includes James Cracknell, Matthew Pinsent and Tim Foster (pictured left to right, with Redgrave second left) – appeared a certainty until they were sensationally beaten into fourth place in the final of the World Cup Regatta in Lucerne in July. It was only the third major competition defeat in eight years for Redgrave, but David Goldstrum is sure that the 38-year-old can still create history.

'It was a great shock that they lost to Italy, Australia and New Zealand, and it does mean their psychological advantage of being unbeatable has now been lost. The Olympic final will be a much more open race now, but I'm hopeful that they'll win gold.'

Goldstrum also believes the men's eight boat is capable of a medal, possibly behind the Australians on home water. Greg Searle and Ed Coode are also tipped in the men's pair, with Goldstrum adding: 'I would think they will make the final and bronze is a distinct possibility.'



CANOEING

PAUL RATCLIFFE (pictured) has a great chance of claiming an early gold medal for Britain in the canoeing.

Ratcliffe will hope to be competing in the men's kayak slalom final on day five of the Games, and David Goldstrum has tipped the 26-year-old for glory. 'Paul is a man to watch out for at the Olympics,' he says. 'He could win one of our first golds in Australia, and that would be fantastic for him and give him the extra publicity he deserves.'

Elsewhere in the canoeing events, Goldstrum selects the Train brothers – Andrew and Stephen – as medal hopefuls in the 1000m Canadian doubles event. 'They are very experienced and came sixth four years ago, so if they make it to the final they could have a chance of a medal,' he says.

SWIMMING

GREAT BRITAIN may not make quite the splash it hopes in the pool, according to Drew Gordon. 'All our swimmers will have to pull out personal best times just to have a chance of a medal,' he explains. 'I can see us having five or six swimmers in finals, but to have an outside chance of a medal they would have to swim their best times ever and even quicker.' Britain's Mark Foster has his work cut out against world record-holder Alexander Popov in the 50m freestyle, while Paul Palmer is our best hope in the 200m and 400m freestyle.
For the women, former European champion Sue Rolph (pictured) is the major British talent over the short distances, but she will have to overcome Holland's multiple world record-holder Inge de Bruijn.

The 2000 Olympics begin in Sydney on September 15th. British Eurosport will be on the air round the clock during the Games, including live coverage from 11.00pm every night. The channel will also be going interactive for the Games, so you can e-mail your favourite commentator with questions and have your answers read out on air. For more details visit the British Eurosport website at www.eurosport.com

HOCKEY

GREAT BRITAIN'S victory over West Germany in the final of the men's hockey in Seoul was one of the highlights of the 1988 Games. But this year it could be the women who take the spotlight, according to Nick Irvine. 'I am very hopeful for the women's team. They have worked very hard and their results back that up,' he explains. 'They could easily progress to the semi-finals, and from there anything could happen. I certainly wouldn't bet against them. 'Jane Sixsmith is still playing well, with Rhona Simpson, Tina Cullen, Sue Chandler, Hilary Rose and Carolyn Reid being exciting players to look out for.'

FEVER

ATHLETICS

Tim Hutchings is predicting that the British track and field squad will return home with only four or five medals between them. 'Olympic gold medals are not easy to come across,' he explains. 'And every country across the globe is now producing world-class athletes. We would be lucky to win any gold.'
Denise Lewis (pictured) in the heptathlon must be Britain's main hope for gold, especially after breaking her own British and Commonwealth record in July.
According to Hutchings, Katharine Merry also has a chance of a medal in the 400m: 'She is the most exciting athlete to emerge recently. She has beaten nearly all her main rivals, and there could be a lot more left to come of her.'
Of the men, Hutchings tips Colin Jackson: 'He looks to be ready to peak for the Olympic 110m hurdles, although Allen Johnson from the USA will be hard to beat.
'We also have some good young 100m runners in Jason Gardener and Dwain Chambers. However, the best chance of a medal might come in the 4x100m relay, where we should finish behind America, although they might drop the baton and give us the gold!'

CYCLING

THINK of British cycling and the name Chris Boardman probably springs to mind. But the team of Jason Queally, Chris Hoy and Craig MacLean – who are competing in the Olympic sprint – may well be our best chance of winning cycling gold. David Duffield is tipping the trio to do very well: 'They have a very good chance after winning the silver in the world championships in Berlin last year.' Boardman is competing for Britain in the time-trial, alongside David Millar, and Duffield believes they too have a chance. 'They could both get into the top six, but it will be tough.' In the road-race Duffield selects Max Sciandri as the man to watch, as the Briton attempts to match, or perhaps better, the bronze medal he won in Atlanta four years ago.

EQUESTRIANISM

'BRITAIN might not have won an Olympic medal in equestrianism since 1984 in Los Angeles, but this time the team is very excited and confident that they can do it,' says Peter Churchill.
'We can win medals in Sydney, especially in the team events. We are definitely in with a chance in the showjumping team event. The only problem is that our horses tend to be either a bit too old or a little bit young. This is the only sport at the Olympics where you have to have two athletes at the top of their game.
'In the three-day eventing, Britain has a very good chance in the team event as we are the current European champions.'

Bridging the gap

Chelsea's summer signings will help them match their closest rivals, Dennis Wise tells Marc Isaacs

IT'S THE only domestic trophy missing from Chelsea's silverware collection, but Dennis Wise (pictured) believes his club's summer spending spree will bring them the Premier League title next May.

Wise has been a major part of the transformation at Stamford Bridge over the past four years. Last season's FA Cup win followed their 1997 triumph in the competition, and their 1998 treble of the then Coca-Cola Cup, the European Cup Winners' Cup and the European Super Cup.

But the 33-year-old international still dreams about adding the highly-prized Premier League trophy to his tally.

Chelsea's best challenge in recent years came two seasons ago when they finished third – four points behind champions Manchester United. Last season, they came a disappointing fifth, and missed out on a place in the Champions League.

However, the summer signings of Jimmy Floyd Hasselbaink, Eidur Gudjohnsen and Mario Stanic – with their combined price tag of £24.6m – have encouraged Wise to think Chelsea can now become the number one team in England.

'Gianluca Vialli has signed three new strikers who give us great competition for places this season,' says Wise. 'With their added quality, there's a great chance for us to win the title.'

It's a sentiment Chelsea chairman Ken Bates would no doubt appreciate. He may be aiming to build a new stand at Stamford Bridge, but footing the huge bill for the three stars would indicate he isn't neglecting the playing side.

'He's still putting his money where his mouth is and trying to make this club even greater,' insists Wise. 'We've won a lot of trophies, but we're missing the Premier League title, and it's something we'd all love to bring here.'

Wise adds that the club have learned from their mistake of not having a big enough squad to cope with the sheer number of matches in recent years. The new players not only make Chelsea a much stronger team, but also give Vialli the option of rotating the squad, which could prove useful in their current season, which also sees them playing in the Uefa Cup.

'We played too many games last season and couldn't cope,' admits the midfield terrier. 'That's why we finished fifth.'

The hope is that the squad now has the quality and depth to compete with the likes of Manchester United.

'They have a big enough squad to rotate all their players and win games week-in, week-out,' Wise explains. 'Other teams' players get injuries and suspensions, and their position in the league suffers. Buying more quality players each year makes you stronger. That's exactly what we have done.'

Wise believes the £15m capture of Jimmy Hasselbaink from Atletico Madrid could be their most important signing. The striker scored 30 goals last season, and Wise hopes that he can continue that form at Chelsea.

'Jimmy gives us pace and strength up front,' explains Wise. 'It's something that we've perhaps lacked in recent years, as George Weah [now at Manchester City] showed when he scored four goals in eight Premier League starts for us last season. He scares players with his speed. With luck, Jimmy can do the same for us.'

Blues fans will also be heartened by the news that Wise has signed a one-year extension to his contract – taking him to the end of 2003, at which time he'll take up a coaching position at the club. Meanwhile, he's praying that come the end of the season he can win the Premiership and capture that long-sought medal.

Should it elude him again, there will be no one more devastated at the Bridge than the skipper himself. 'It would be disappointing if I can't win the title while I'm still a Chelsea player,' he admits. 'I want to win it for my own satisfaction and for the fans who have waited so long. Whether or not I do it while I'm still playing is another matter. I'm sure Chelsea will win it at some stage. Ken Bates will make sure of it!'

Week 1

Friday 1st September-Friday 8th September

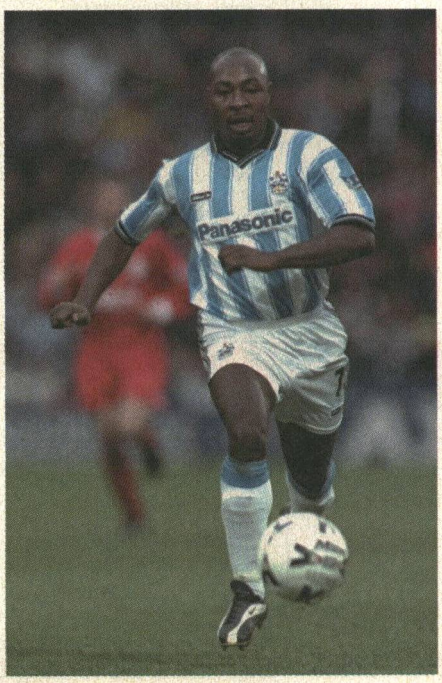
The original action hero

The 1985 bullets-and-brawn thriller Commando is drawn from the most satisfying period of Arnold Schwarzenegger's movie career. Between the years 1982 and 1991, Arnie made his mark as a major action star, enjoying success with a string of unpretentious blockbusters, the best of which were the two Terminator movies and Predator. In Commando, he stars as retired secret service operative John Matrix, who is trying to lead a normal life with his teenage daughter Jenny, at their idyllic, isolated mountain retreat. But super-terrorist Arius (Dan Hedaya) puts an end to this cosy situation when he kidnaps Jenny as part of a plan to force Matrix to assassinate a South American dictator. The 'silent and smooth' Matrix makes a death-defying escape from the plane taking him to the scene of his proposed hit, and he hooks up with stewardess Cindy (Rae Dawn Chong) for a frantic race against time to rescue his daughter. The characters are cartoonish and the plot is full of outrageous contrivances – Schwarzenegger's ram-raid on an army surplus store turns up a staggering arsenal of high-tech weaponry, including a handy rocket launcher; Chong just happens to be taking flying lessons, enabling her to pilot the amphibious plane which will take them to Hedaya's hideout on one of the Santa Barbara Islands. That said, it still scores highly as a no-nonsense action flick. Director Mark L Lester maintains an urgent pace throughout and, despite the uncompromising ferocity of many of the killings, the film has a lightly comic tone.

UK Gold, Thursday 7th, 10.10pm

A sporting chance

Two pre-season promotion hopefuls fight for three points at the City Ground as Nottingham Forest play Huddersfield Town in the Nationwide League. Huddersfield had an excellent start to last season – thanks to skilful striker Clyde Wijnhard (pictured), they sat proudly at the top of the table around Christmas. But it wasn't long before a run of bad form saw the boys slip down the table to eighth place. Their only consolation is that their opponents' fortunes last term were even more disappointing. Like Blackburn Rovers, Forest could not seem to adapt to life back in the First Division. After their one-season sojourn in the Premiership, Forest finished 14th. There's everything to play for and both teams will be playing to win, but who will strike it lucky this time?



Sky Sports 2, Sunday 3rd, 12noon – LIVE

Happy Days are here again

The current fascination with all things Seventies – be it flared trousers, Farrah Fawcett hairstyles or remakes of Shaft and Charlie's Angels – ensured it was only a matter of time before American sitcom Happy Days returned to our television. The nostalgic look at Fifties 'Middle America' (which begins a run on Sky One this week with the episode All the Way) ran in the States from 1974 to 1984 and was at one stage America's top-rating programme. Set in Milwaukee, it made stars out of A-list director Ron Howard, who played Richie Cunningham, an awkward teenager, and Henry Winkler, who played Fonzie, his street-wise mentor.

In the course of 255 episodes, Fonzie made it his business to help out Richie and his two nerdy pals, Potsie and Ralph; kiss every woman in Wisconsin (never more than a kiss, mind you); always wear black leather jackets and intermittently entertain the teens by sticking up his thumbs while leaning back slightly and uttering his trademark 'aaaaayyyhhhh'.

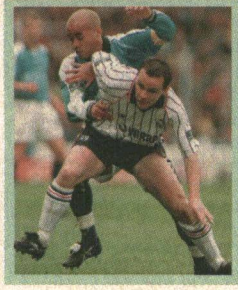
by Ross Biddiscombe



Two clubs with lowly status but lofty ambitions – Tranmere Rovers and Stockport County (whose Kevin Cooper is pictured, right) – do battle tonight at Prenton Park. Under John Aldridge's stewardship, Rovers have exceeded all expectations with solid players like Alan Morgan (pictured, left) showing their full potential. Last season's cup runs, especially reaching the final of the Worthington Cup, were the greatest moments in the club's history, but Aldridge will want more this year.

SEPTEMBER BIRTHDAYS
2nd Salma Hayek 3rd Charlie Sheen
9th Hugh Grant 25th Catherine Zeta-Jones
25th Michael Douglas 28th Gwyneth Paltrow

Sensational ★★★ Stimulating ★★ Satisfactory ★

Aries
21 March-20 April ★
ONE of your romantic illusions may be shattered and you'll come back down to Earth with a bang. The powerful Sun provides a reality check this month and unless you want further heartbreak, you must learn how to let go.

Taurus
21 April-21 May ★★★
YOU'LL get into the groove this month and make the most of assets or talents. There's always a danger your sign will rest on its laurels, but Sun in earthy cousin Virgo provides the impetus to make more of your life.

Gemini
22 May-21 June ★★
KEEP your finger on the pulse and your wits about you, and there'll be fewer glitches in your love life. Bear in mind that the stars are subtle this month and it won't be easy to pick up on the moods of those around you.

Cancer
22 June-23 July ★★
IT'S time to set the record straight in a relationship, even if it means admitting a past mistake and begging for forgiveness. Your sign often sees situations subjectively and enjoys the last word, but compromise is the key to happiness this month.

Leo
24 July-23 August ★★
YOUR mood may be dreamy, but it's important not to lose perspective this month. You could be inclined to put a loved one up on a pedestal, or you will look at relationships through rose-coloured glasses rather than assessing them honestly.

Virgo
24 August-23 September ★★★
SUN in your sign gives you a powerful aura and makes you irresistible to others. You have a lot to offer this month, so cast aside self-doubt and set your own terms in a relationship. It is important not to undersell yourself!

Libra
24 September-23 October ★★
SAFEGUARD your own happiness by not allowing others to take advantage of your kind nature. Your innate need to keep the peace is sometimes your greatest downfall, so try to find the right balance between duty and desire.

Scorpio
24 October-22 November ★★
TRY to see the good in people and situations, rather than always dwelling on the negative aspects. With Sun in the humanitarian part of your chart most of the month, the focus should be what you can do for others.

Sagittarius
23 November-22 December ★★
MARS adds adventure to your life, propelling you into situations you'd usually shy away from. Some of you may take a gamble on a risky relationship this month, while others make plans that take you well outside your comfort zone.

Capricorn
23 December-20 January ★★★
YOUR ruler Saturn in frivolous Gemini helps you lighten up and look for love in unusual places. Normally you prefer to play a low-key role, but this month you'll attract plenty of attention with your sparkling wit and charm.

Aquarius
21 January-19 February ★★
YOUR heart may be in two places, but in your mind there's no doubt where your loyalties lie. If you've been undecided about a relationship, Venus helps clarify the situation this month and you'll finally make the right decision.

Pisces
20 February-20 March ★★
KNOWLEDGE is power and clever Mercury makes you eager to learn this month. Rather than expecting opportunity to come knocking or love to land in your lap, motivate yourself to make the first move and follow your heartfelt dreams.

Week 2

Saturday 9th September-Friday 15th September

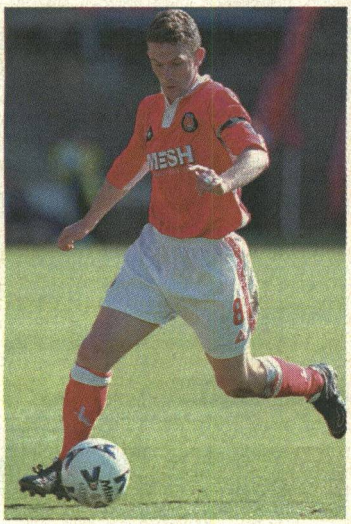
Bad to the bone

The confident, if derivative, directorial debut of actor Peter Berg (who contributed fine character studies to the likes of The Last Seduction and Copland), Very Bad Things is a darkly intriguing, moral dilemma drama. Kyle Fisher (Jon Favreau) journeys to Las Vegas with a group of his buddies, including Robert (Christian Slater) and brothers Michael (Jeremy Piven) and Adam (Daniel Stern), to have one last burst of debauchery before he gets married to Laura (Cameron Diaz). But what starts out as spirited macho hi-jinx quickly degenerates into a nightmare when one of the friends accidentally kills a prostitute in the gang's hotel room. The previously close pals are torn apart by fights and finger-pointing, and then the bodies begin to mount up. The ensemble give generally good performances, but Daniel Stern, who you may remember from the Home Alone and City Slickers movies, is the most impressive, supplying a skilfully observed study in paranoia. Very Bad Things has its share of unsettling, thought-provoking situations, and Berg infects the proceedings with a pungent sense of guilt. But the film is ultimately unsatisfying when compared to its uncredited source – the edgy, 1997 straight-to-video title Stag, directed by Gavin Wilding and starring Andrew McCarthy and Mario Van Peebles. The plot premise is identical to Stag (though it borrows elements from Deliverance and Shallow Grave, too) but it lacks the resonance of Wilding's film, trading its hair-trigger tension and clammy atmosphere for consciously quirky, defiantly tasteless comedy.

Sky MovieMax, Wednesday 13th, 10.00pm

Pride of Kinsella

The never-say-die attitude of Charlton's talismanic skipper Mark Kinsella (pictured, in last season's strip) is a constant source of inspiration to the rest of the team. Whether he's trotting out against non-league side Welling United in a pre-season friendly or Manchester United at Old Trafford, the midfield maestro always puts his all into the game – and expects the same from his team-mates. The 1999-2000 First Division champions, take on Derby at Pride Park this Sunday. Graham Stuart will be battling it out with Claus Jensen, a promising new signing from Bolton, to perform alongside the captain in the centre of the park, with John Robinson and Shaun Newton probably taking up positions on each flank. But manager Alan Curbishley doesn't have many options up front. Inscrutable Swede Martin Pringle (who scored a great goal the last time Charlton visited Derby two years ago) and his fellow countryman Matt Svensson are both nursing injuries, while Clive Mendonca, who missed most of the club's last campaign, may not be back to match fitness. That leaves only Andy Hunt, last season's top scorer, and new boy Jonatan Johansson. It's not ideal, but the Addicks' famously attack-minded midfield will no doubt also be doing its best to trouble the Derby defence.



Sky Sports 1, Sunday 10th, 3.30pm – LIVE

Going down to South Park

In the year that The Simpsons celebrates its tenth anniversary on British television, South Park – one of the many cartoons that was commissioned in its wake – is standing out as the leader of the adult-animation pack. So what's its secret? Well, not only are the naïve kids from South Park ruder, cruder and badder than the Simpsons of Springfield, but they still represent the cutting edge of adult humour. Even though it's in its fourth season, the banter between best friends Kyle, Stan, Kenny and Cartman remains eternally youthful, as the insufferably cute but foul-mouthed youngsters continue to poke fun at just about everything (no matter how taboo the subject) during the course of their slapstick adventures into the strange, the inexplicable and the totally weird. Trey Parker and Matt Stone have clearly created much more than a cartoon comedy. Boasting a top 40 album and a feature film, South Park is an institution, rivalled only by the likes of Disney.

COMPILED by PHILIPPA PROBERT

Holy smoke, Batman!

BRUCE WAYNE may have hung up his cape and retired the Batmobile, but fear not – a new Batman is set to ride! Schoolboy Terry (voiced by Boy Meets World's Will Friedle) accidentally stumbles upon the Batcave and happily takes on the role of the brave caped crusader, with an elderly Wayne as his mentor. This action-packed animated series has a fresh, up-to-the-minute appearance (with a new-look, gadget-laden batsuit for Batman to utilise) and comes flying your way, with attitude!

Batman of the Future, Cartoon Network, weekdays 5.30pm, 9.30pm, weekends 11.30am, from Monday 4th

WIN! To celebrate the arrival of Batman of the Future we have five bat-tastic goody packs, courtesy of Cartoon Network, to be won! Each pack contains a radio-controlled Batmobile, bat-ear radio, bat torch and action figure! To be in with a chance of getting your hands on one of these great Batman collections, just answer this question:

Who is Batman of the Future's mentor?

a) Mr Freeze, b) The Joker, c) Bruce Wayne

Send your answer on a postcard, with your name and address, to Cable Guide/Batman competition, PO BOX 2176, London W1A 5TW. The first five correct entries drawn will win. Closing date 30 September 2000. Full Cable Guide competition rules are on page 216.

Abbey days

THE peaceful life of Redwall Abbey is under threat. Orphaned mouse Matthius and the rest of the gentle community face the dark side of the animal world as the villainous rat, Cluny The Scouge, and his crew battle against them.

The medieval animated tale of Redwall comes to Nickelodeon this month, adapted from the best-selling novels by British author Brian Jacques.

Writing only during the spring and summer months, Brian settles down in a sunny corner of his garden and types his stories on an old typewriter, as he has done for more than ten years.

Now the world of Redwall has been brought to life on screen by Canadian company Nalvana, and the producer of the animated series, Jocelyn Hamilton, tells Cable Guide she was thrilled to work on such a popular story: 'This is a wonderful book. I think Redwall is one of the greatest series we have done.'

It took some 200 people and 16 months to produce the 13-part series (a second series is currently in production), and Brian Jacques has been involved throughout. 'Brian is very helpful,' says Jocelyn. 'Of course, he understands the world of Redwall better than anybody!'

Redwall, Nickelodeon, weekdays 4pm, from Wednesday 13th

WIN! We have five fabulous Redwall collections up for grabs, courtesy of Random House Children's Publishers. The packs comprise a hardback edition of Brian Jacques's Lord Brocktree (Hutchinson, rrp £12.99), a paperback copy of Brian Jacques's The Legend of Luke (Red Fox, rrp £4.99) and Redwall Friend and Foe, Brian Jacques's guide to Redwall's heroes and villains (Red Fox, rrp £4.99). To be in with a chance to win, just answer this question:

What's the name of the young mouse in Redwall?

Send your answer on a postcard, with your name and address, to Cable Guide/Redwall competition, PO BOX 2176, London W1A 5TW. The first five correct entries drawn will win. Closing date 30 September 2000. Full Cable Guide competition rules are on page 216.

LIVE FORD MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL: TOTTENHAM V WEST HAM SKY SPORTS 1 7.00PM

Tottenham and their manager George Graham have ambitions for more than just mid-table security in the Premier League, and they'll be hoping for a fast start this season. If players like the Republic of Ireland international Stephen Carr (pictured, left) provide that little bit extra, then the good times might roll back to White Hart Lane. Skill is also in the air with tonight's opponents West Ham, especially from the feet of the talented youngster Joe Cole (pictured, right) and, of course, Paolo Di Canio.

Riding high

He's starred in Boy Meets World for seven years and as the last series starts on Disney Channel, Rider Strong can look ahead to a bright future. Words: Hilary Bonner

RIDER STRONG is just 20 years old and already he has co-starred in major feature films with the likes of Donald Sutherland, Amy Irving and Billy Crystal.

Rider appears set to become a Hollywood movie heart-throb, and as college freshman Shawn Hunter in Boy Meets World he has won a huge TV following.

But Rider is a young man of many parts. As well as being a keen sportsman and outdoors guy, he's a poet, has written several screenplays, and he's already a producer for film and stage.

With his elder brother Shiloh, Rider produced home videos from an early age and five years ago the brothers co-produced and starred in the Los Angeles stage production of a play called Shades of Blue, written by Shiloh.

Since completing the final series of Boy Meets World last year, Rider has been immersed in another major project. He is currently co-producing the movie Buck Naked Arson, in which he also stars.

Born in San Francisco, Rider made his professional debut aged only nine, playing Gavroche in the city's production of Les Miserables. He then became Julie Andrews' son in the TV series Julie and made guest appearances in a host of TV series, including Home Improvement, before landing a leading role in Boy Meets World.

Rider, who is very close to his parents King and Lin, and brother Shiloh, says of the part of Shawn: 'He has led a confusing family life, and I think that is what has provoked him to develop his signature bravado and cavalier attitude about life.'

Rider describes himself as a real outdoors type. The family home is on the coast and close to a redwood forest, and he enjoys backpacking, white-water rafting, swimming, playing soccer and roller blading.

But he is studious too. When he finishes producing Buck Naked Arson this year, Rider will be going back to school – to study writing at Columbia University.

'Books are a rich enjoyment in life, tied with music as my favourite art form.' he says. 'I think a book can be the fastest way to change your life, if you pick the right one. I know most people hate it, but one of my favourite things is writing essays for a literature class.'

Music is also a great passion.

'I am literally addicted to music. A friend of mine once took me aside and had a long talk with me about how he had decided I need a break from music, because I really can't go more than a few hours without something beautiful filling the silence.'

Boy Meets World, Disney Channel, daily – new series weekdays, 6.30pm, from Monday 4th

Saturday 16th September-Friday 22nd September

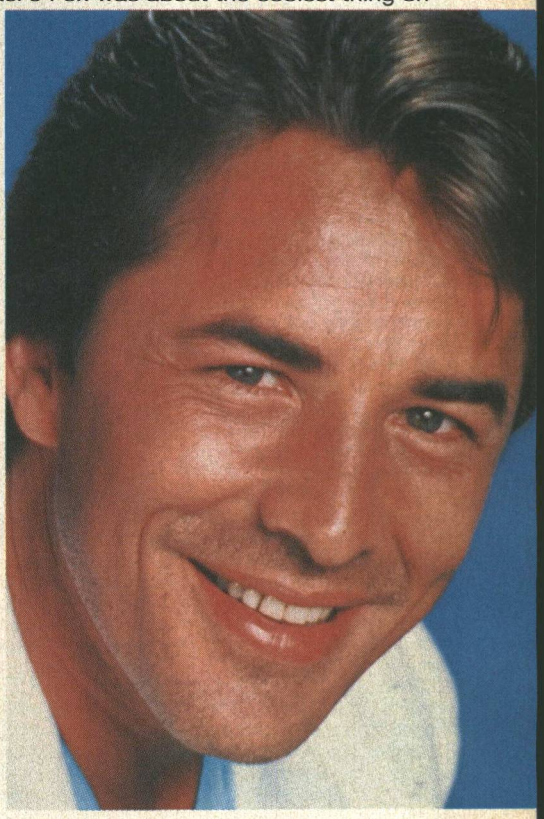
Triple strength Al Pacino

The movies that comprise Sky Cinema's Al Pacino triple-bill all rank as landmarks in the actor's career. The harrowing drug drama The Panic in Needle Park (11.55pm) was Pacino's first starring part, and his insightful portrayal of a junkie was influential in winning his career-making role in The Godfather. After excellent performances in the likes of Seventies classics Serpico, The Godfather Part II and Dog Day Afternoon, Pacino made a few bad movie choices, most notably 1980's critically savaged Cruising (1.45am), which saw the actor at his most uncomfortable as a straight cop who passes himself of as gay to track down a serial killer preying on homosexuals. After the ridicule meted out on the 1985 historical drama Revolution, Pacino entered a self-imposed exile, emerging four years later with the tightly constructed thriller Sea of Love (10.00pm).

Sky Cinema, Sunday 17th, from 10.00pm

The vice squad

Scantily clad women, oversized powerboats, Phil Collins, dodgy baggy white suits with rolled-up sleeves worn over pink T-shirts, and slip-on shoes worn without socks. Surely that's a recipe for a monumental TV turkey? But, no. Miami Vice encapsulated Eighties cool like no other programme from that decade and was an instant success. Moody cops Crockett (Don Johnson) and Tubbs (Philip Michael Thomas) quickly set the standard for Eighties chic and led the way in the field of male fashion. The sultry pair – oozing street cred at a time when Michael J Fox was about the coolest thing on TV – hit UK screens in 1984 and quickly became sex icons for a generation of viewers. Miami Vice ran for 111 episodes and was finally axed in 1989 when viewers woke up and realised that perhaps the Eighties was just a bad dream and that the pastel colours that Crockett made popular were not fashionable at all. Don Johnson was the show's flashy star and has since gone on to moderate film and television success, including his own show Nash Bridges and parts in a string of rather unspectacular films, including Tin Cup in 1996, co-starring Kevin Costner. Philip Michael Thomas was a little more low-key – a word that could also be used to describe his post-Vice career, which has been taken up largely with roles in Italian TV movies and mini-series.



Granada Plus, weekdays from Monday 18th, 9.00pm

A Royle command performance?

Through sheer grit and determination, as well as the inspirational support of a huge, passionate fan base, Joe Royle's Manchester City have climbed from Nationwide Division Two to the Premier League in consecutive seasons. It's a remarkable achievement and Royle will be hoping his team don't 'do a Watford', who also made the same progression, only to be relegated after a one-year sojourn in the top-flight. Instead, City (whose shot-stopper Nicky Weaver is pictured) will probably want their fortunes to mirror those of their opponents at Maine Road this Sunday, Middlesbrough, who were promoted from the first division two years ago and have since established themselves as a solid mid-table Premiership side.

LIVE OLYMPIC GAMES: TRIATHLON BRITISH EUROSPORT 12MIDNIGHT

Australia, this year's Olympic hosts, are dominant in the field of triathlon – an event which is making its Olympic debut. However, Britain's multiple world champion, Simon Lessing (pictured), will be aiming to make his mark in the men's final on the picturesque course through the City Centre area of Sydney. Lessing, probably one of Britain's best gold medal hopes, will want to match the form he enjoyed at the start of this season when he won three events in France and Canada.

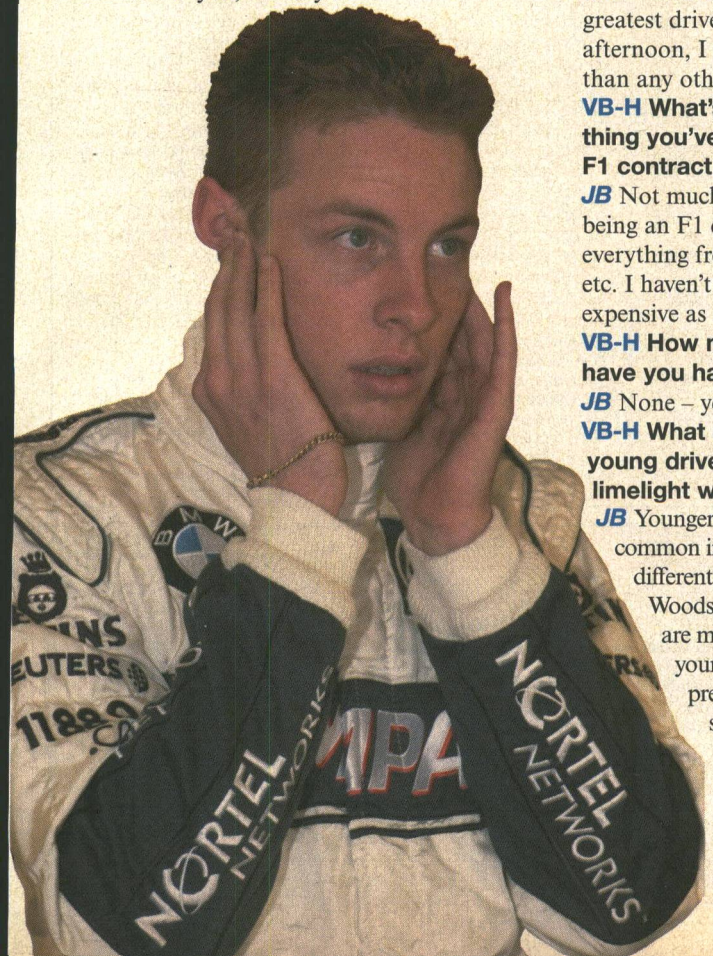
Vicki Butler-Henderson
GIRL RACER

Jenson's drive time

Formula One is about speed, endurance and pressure. Vicki Butler-Henderson finds out how its youngest star is coping with all three ...

AGED just 20, Jenson Button is a bright star. Not just in Formula One, but in British motorsport too. I remember him as an eight-year-old racing karts – a chirpy, befreckled chap, full of determination. Here he talks to Cable Guide as we take a look at Jenson away from the F1 starting button.

VB-H When did you realise you were going to race for the Williams F1 team?
JB I knew when Nav Sidhu (Williams F1 Media Manager) came over to me to say that Frank Williams wanted to see us. I simply couldn't speak when he told me that I was a Formula One driver for BMW Williams F1 – all I could say was, "thank you, thank you".



VB-H What did your mates say?
JB My mates were great. They all called my mobile phone when they saw the announcement on the lunchtime news.

VB-H How have people around you changed since you landed your new job?
JB The really close people around me have not changed at all. My family and friends are no different.

VB-H What are the biggest differences between racing a Formula Three car (as you have done) and a Formula One?
JB Speed and braking. The power of the Williams F1 car is mind-blowing and its stopping ability is simply staggering. Apart from that, the basic principles remain the same between F3 and F1.

VB-H How do you feel about racing with the likes of Michael Schumacher, who you no doubt admired before?
JB Michael is obviously one of the greatest drivers ever, but on a Sunday afternoon, I treat him no differently than any other competitor.

VB-H What's the most expensive thing you've bought since your F1 contract began?
JB Not much! The contradiction about being an F1 driver is that you get everything free – clothes, cars, computers, etc. I haven't actually purchased anything expensive as such!

VB-H How many marriage proposals have you had this year?
JB None – yet!

VB-H What are your thoughts on young drivers being thrust into the limelight when they get to F1?
JB Younger and younger people are now common in most sports and F1 is no different. Look at Michael Owen, Tiger Woods and Tim Henman – these guys are making an impact at a relatively younger age than anyone has previously, and we are seeing a similar trend in F1. If you're good enough then you're old enough, and that helps your discipline when it comes to handling the pressure.

Young racer: Formula One star Jenson Button gets in the fast lane behind the wheel of his BMW Williams

VB-H What has been the hardest aspect of the whole F1 experience you've had to overcome?
JB The hardest aspect of F1 is the schedule – it's non-stop. We race, test, race, test, race, and so on. In between, I work with the Williams F1 PR team on interviews, sponsor engagements and other PR activities – all of which is fun (so far)!

VB-H What is the best and worst thing about being an F1 driver?
JB The best thing is that everything is given to you for free and the worst thing is, well, I don't think there is anything!

VB-H You raced karts from the age of eight, what words of advice would you give to eight-year-olds in getting to F1?
JB My advice would be to follow your instincts and never give up! The same advice you would apply to any ambition in life.

VB-H What road car do you drive?
JB I drive a BMW M5.

VB-H How much teasing did you get after being caught speeding in France?
JB Quite a lot, especially from the Williams F1 boys!

VB-H What superstitions do you have before a race?
JB I don't have any pre-race superstitions.

VB-H What other job would you do if you weren't a racer?
JB That's an impossible question to answer. I have no idea – probably a film director!

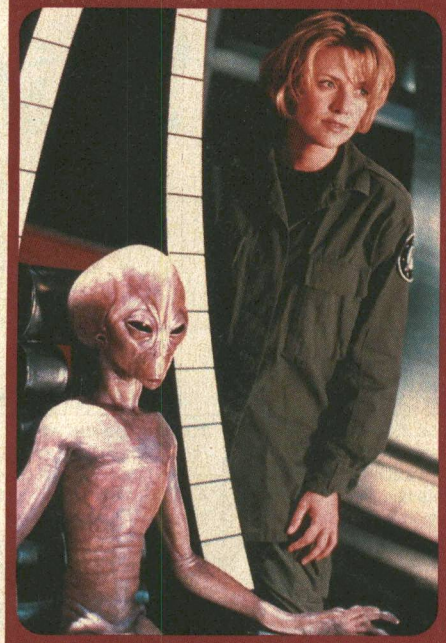
Amanda's major success



Get Carter: Amanda taps in to the alien forces in Stargate SG-1

Amanda Tapping has a huge following among sci-fi fans, thanks to a starring role in Stargate SG-1 as Major Samantha Carter. Not bad for an Essex-born actress who vowed never to 'do television'. Interview: Paul Simpson

WATCH Stargate SG-1 and the impression you could get of Amanda Tapping's Major Samantha Carter is of an uptight, raging feminist – particularly in the early episodes. So, not surprisingly, the Essex-born actress admits quite freely that she didn't like her character when the series first started.

'This diatribe, standing on my soapbox fighting the gender war, was so tired,' she says. 'Women don't talk like that, and I wanted Sam to be fully realised as a human being, not just a ramrod. I didn't want her to be one-dimensional. I wanted her to be an integral part of the team who just happened to be a woman.'

As Stargate enters its fourth year, the new episodes concentrate more on developing the characters, so viewers will see a softer side to Sam Carter.

'Slowly but surely, she's lightening up,' Amanda explains. 'She's getting a bit of a sense of humour; she doesn't have to prove herself any more. I think it's one of the nicest things the producers could have done. She can be rather sharp.'

This doesn't mean the rough edges won't appear from time to time. 'I think they have to, to keep her interesting. If we soften her too much, then she becomes boring, and much as I want her to be an integral part of the team – not "the girl"– there are still situations where there's that feisty fire in her.'

It's almost become a cliché to describe the atmosphere on the set of a TV show as being like a family, but Amanda believes it's absolutely true in the case of Stargate. 'It's not a cliché at all,' she says. 'By the nature of the friendship we actors have making the show, it allows the chemistry of the team to grow. We're lucky, everyone genuinely cares about each other. It's not that we don't have our differences but we're the quintessential family: I'd do anything for these guys. They'd do the same for me.'

Amanda always wanted to be an actress, but the stage was her first love. 'When I graduated from theatre school,' she recalls, 'I vowed I would never do television, never prostitute myself for my art. Then the bills came in, and I did a commercial for a doughnut shop. The cheque paid my rent for three months. I realised I could do theatre, and commercials would pay my rent. But I never anticipated being in a series.'

The road to SG-1 was the normal mix of auditions, demo tapes and a lot of waiting. 'My husband thought I was going psychotic,' she laughs. 'One minute I was saying, "I don't want the part," the next I was saying, "I really love this character! She's so good."'

OLYMPIC GAMES: SWIMMING
BRITISH EUROSPORT 7.30AM, 2.00PM, 8.00PM

As well as his involvement in the individual events, Paul Palmer (pictured) could be bidding for an Olympic medal in the men's 4 x 200m freestyle relay final at the International Aquatic Centre today. A position on the podium may help to compensate for the loss of his crown at the European Championships in Helsinki in July, when an out-of-form Palmer took bronze behind Italy's Emiliano Brembilla and Romania's Dragos Coman, after having snatched gold in Istanbul a year earlier.

In Sydney, the 1992 and 1996 Olympic gold medallist coxless pair Matthew Pinsent and Steve Redgrave will be aiming for another victory – but this time in the coxless four. They have joined forces with highly accomplished rowers James Cracknell and Tim Foster for this event. LIVE EURO TOUR GOLF: BELGACOM OPEN SKY SPORTS 1 1.30PM

The Belgacom Open might be one of the newer events on the European Tour, but the players seem to like it, with many top stars lining up to play since it began two years ago. England's Lee Westwood won the inaugural competition and he was followed in 1999 by Robert Karlsson of Sweden. But, as the action tees off, look out for Northern Ireland's Darren Clarke (pictured) who will look to retain his status as No 1 in the Volvo Order of Merit. The prize money tops 1m euros.

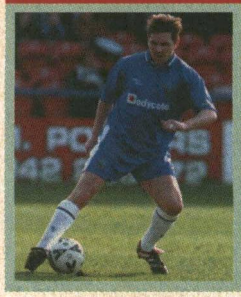
LIVE FOOTBALL LEAGUE: MACCLESFIELD V DARLINGTON SKY SPORTS 2 7.00PM



If Darlington can put the disappointment of a Wembley play-off final defeat behind them, then tonight's visit to Macclesfield should be a happy one. The Durham side – under new manager Gary Bennett – are among the favourites for promotion from Division Three this season, and the team includes the dependable Martin Gray (pictured, right). The Silkmen need players like Simon Collins (pictured, left) to help them return to the impressive form they showed early last season.

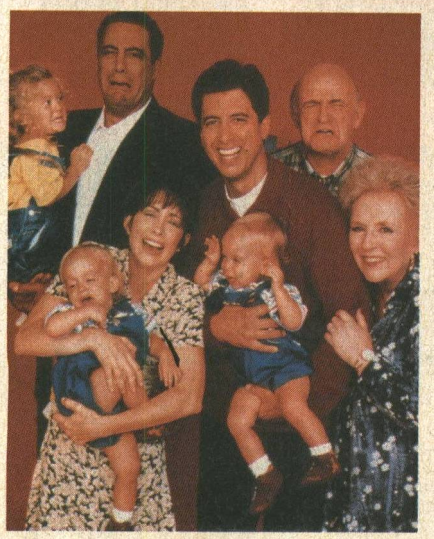
A Ray of light for sitcom fans



One of the golden rules of being a good writer is to write about what you know. That applies equally to comedy, and New York stand-up comic Ray Romano has been rewarded for doing just that – he is now the star of his own hit sitcom, Everybody Loves Raymond, which is based on the humorous, and often bizarre, happenings in his real-life family. The main character, Ray Barone, played by Romano, is a successful sportswriter living with his wife Debra (Patricia Heaton), young daughter Ally and toddler twins Geoffrey and Michael. But it's his meddling but well-meaning parents, who live over the road, and his obsessive-compulsive brother Robert who provide most of the humour. Together the trio conspire to watch Ray's every move. Romano was working on the New York comedy club circuit when he got his first big break on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show. Rival talk show host David Letterman became a big fan and he was soon signed up for his very own series, which has now been nominated for six Emmys – a move which ensures Romano has had the last laugh on his interfering family.

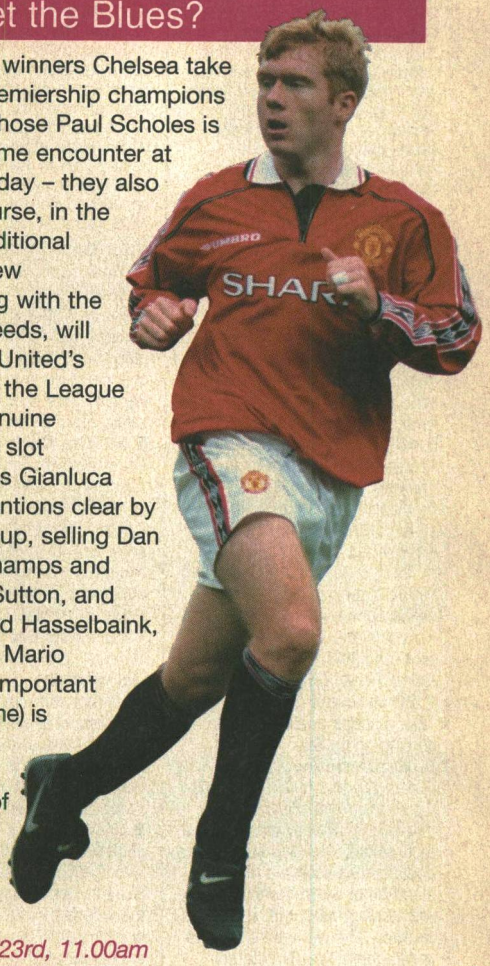
Will United get the Blues?



Last season's FA Cup winners Chelsea take on the might of the Premiership champions Manchester United (whose Paul Scholes is pictured) in a brunchtime encounter at Old Trafford this Saturday – they also met last month, of course, in the Charity Shield, the traditional curtain-raiser to the new season. Chelsea, along with the likes of Arsenal and Leeds, will be hoping to scupper United's seeming monopoly on the League title and emerge as genuine contenders for the top slot themselves. Blues boss Gianluca Vialli has made his intentions clear by having a squad shake-up, selling Dan Petrescu, Didier Deschamps and troubled striker Chris Sutton, and bringing in Jimmy Floyd Hasselbaink, Eidur Gudjohnsen and Mario Stanic. United's most important acquisition (at press time) is new keeper Fabien Barthez, who should put an end to the sort of uncertainty that Mark Bosnich sometimes displayed between the sticks last season.

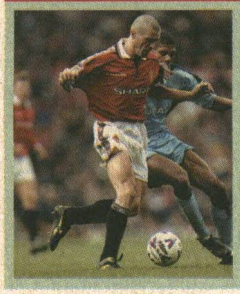
LIVE MANCHESTER UNITED V CHELSEA SKY SPORTS 1 11.00AM



Who can beat Manchester United to the Premier League title this year? Well, Chelsea have threatened to but failed over the last three seasons, and today the two clubs face each other in an early season skirmish. The midfield is where the games are usually won and lost between these two, so if United's Roy Keane (pictured, left) can subdue Chelsea's Dennis Wise (pictured, right), then the Old Trafford men will delight their home fans once more with victory.

OLYMPIC GAMES: ATHLETICS
BRITISH EUROSPORT 1.00PM, 4.00AM

The 400 metres hurdles is back in fashion for Britain thanks to the sterling performances of Belgrave Harrier Chris Rawlinson (pictured). At a meeting in Milan in June, the Yorkshireman recorded a time of 48.22 seconds, then the fastest time in the world for 2000. Today, at the Olympic Stadium in Sydney, Rawlinson will have to record a time close to that if he is to emulate David Hemery, who won the gold medal for Britain at this event in Mexico City in 1968.

★ BRITISH EUROSPORT'S TOUR DE FORCE

HAVING watched this year's coverage of the Tour de France on British Eurosport, I must congratulate everyone involved on the spectacular day-to-day coverage of the event – it even topped last year's coverage.

The final day was made even more spectacular by the stunning aerial shots of Paris as the riders took off for the last stage.

Thank you to David Duffield and his team for their professional coverage and for telling viewers what was going on at each stage throughout the race.

I am now looking forward to the Olympics, and the only channel I will be glued to is British Eurosport.

ELLIOTTS' LAST ORDERS?

There's a £50 prize for the star letter!

I HAVE just watched the last episode of The House of Elliott on UK Gold for the second time! Was there a conclusion to this series – any final episodes? Did The House of Elliott move in to ready-made wear and the couture die? Or did Eve, against all odds, stay and fight to continue to swathe the rich old dowagers of the world with silks, beads and satins?

I need to know if the series continued to some sort of conclusion, even if Bea was abducted by aliens and Eve took to smoking cigars and calling herself Albert!

Mrs Stephanie Parker
e-mail

● UK Gold informs us that they have shown every episode of the three series that were made. They have no plans at present to show* The House of Elliott *again.

GONE WEST?

TO QUOTE the great Toby Ziegler [from The West Wing], 'Did you fall down and hit your head? Did you hit your head on something hard?' I ask this question of Sky One regarding the evil idea that they have not picked up season two of The West Wing – it's the hit of the year, it's got a cult following and it's just nabbed 18 Emmy nominations! And the season finale left us all wondering, who's been hit? This is cruel and unnatural behaviour on behalf of Sky.

Jane Timberlake, e-mail

● Sky One informs us that they have no current plans to screen series two of* The West Wing, *or to repeat season one. However, Channel 4 intends to show season one next year.

ANOTHER PEEK AT THE CREEK

I LOVE Dawson's Creek and have been waiting for it to appear again on Trouble ever since it last aired. When will Trouble be repeating the series again?

Paul Knowles, e-mail

● You're in luck, Paul! Dawson's Creek is back on Trouble in September from Saturday 2nd, with the first series.

Way back when ... catch the Capeside crew in the first series of Dawson's Creek

A FURTHER DOSE OF MEDICINE, PLEASE

I'M A big fan of Dr Quinn Medicine Woman on Disney Channel and love watching all the repeats. However, season five, which ended with a cliffhanger, was first shown at least a year ago. I'm desperate to see season six (the last one ever). Can you tell me, when will it be shown?

Karen Ford, e-mail

● Sorry, Karen. Disney Channel informs us that they have no current plans to show series six of* Dr Quinn Medicine Woman.

A CLASSIC COMMENT

I'VE enjoyed the reruns of the Seventies TV shows on Granada Plus, but they seem to be running the same ones over and over again, apart from the on-going Classic Coronation Street which has run from 1976 to 1986 at present, and Emmerdale.

These have been great but have got very 'modern day'. What about running Classic Coronation Street from before 1976, or putting on other Seventies classics, especially Queenie's Castle, made by Yorkshire TV, featuring Diana Dors and Lynne Perrie – it was great!

Richard Hammond
Manchester

● Granada Plus responds: 'We ran* Coronation Street *from 1976 because prior episodes were shown in black and white, which aren't so popular with many viewers. We do show many, many Seventies classics, and welcome any suggestions from viewers on what they want to see.'

IT'S POPULAR STUFF, ALL RIGHT!

CONGRATULATIONS to Sky One on the launch of the new series Popular. I think that it will be a huge success because it concentrates on themes that are so realistic! It's absolutely hilarious watching 20-year-olds pretending to be 16-year-olds, screened at an hour when 12-year-olds watch the programme! Adult dramas such as ER and JAG are good, but the actors are drawing their old age pensions – so let the 21st century teen genre run riot!

Mo, e-mail

SPELLBOUND

I WAS upset to see in August's Cable Guide that Charmed finished. Could you please tell me when it is due to start again, because my son and I love watching it. Thanks.

V Salt, e-mail

● Living informs us that series two of* Charmed will be repeated again this month from Wednesday 13th. The third series of Charmed *is still in production.

THE BIG FREIZE CONTINUES

I CAN'T believe Cartoon Network axed Dragonball Z again! And practically in the same place! What will happen after the holidays? Will it go back to the beginning again? There are over 100 episodes, but the last one anyone saw was about 80! I really enjoy DBZ, but seeing the same episodes again and again is getting annoying!

Nicola Johnson
e-mail

● Cartoon Network responds: 'You'll be pleased to know that* DBZ returns on Monday 4th at 5.00pm with brand new episodes, and the continuation of the Freize Saga. So get ready for an action-packed autumn, especially as Cartoon Network's brand new series Batman of the Future follows DBZ*!'
